

MEDIA COVERAGE

ISLAMIC CURRICULUM ON PEACE AND COUNTER TERRORISM

BY SHAYKH-UL-ISLAM DR MUHAMMAD
TAHIR-UL-QADRI

Index

MEDIA COVERAGE EUROPE, USA AND AUSTRALIA.....	6
Islamic scholar tells British Muslims to march for peace to show they don't 'quietly condone' terrorism .....	7
Adept scholar Tahir ul Qadri proposes 'Anti-Terror Curriculum' .....	10
Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has wrote the peace curriculum in English, Arabic and Urdu language to counter the arguments of extremists and so-called Islamic institutions that they are doing in the name of Islam.....	10
Tahir-ul-Qadri issued a detailed fatwa five years ago declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers. ....	11
Anti-extremism curriculum gets cold reception from UK government .....	13
Is teaching a counter-terrorism curriculum the best way to stop young people being radicalised? ...	15
As a Muslim community organisation launches a special counter-terrorism curriculum this week, will theological teachings help the UK challenge extremism?.....	15
Teaching proper Islamic principles will help stem extremism.....	17
Islamic cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in scholarly bid to fight extremism .....	19
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	21
Counter-terrorism curriculum developed by Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri .....	23
Counter-terrorism curriculum developed by Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri .....	24
Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum.....	27
Religious Urged To Fight Radicalization As Cleric Launches 'Counter-Terrorism' Curriculum .....	29
Pakistani Cleric Launches Anti-Islamic State Curriculum in Britain .....	30
Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain .....	32
Counter-terrorism curriculum launches in the UK.....	33
Islamic scholar releases extensive theological rebuttal of extremist ideology .....	35
Islamic Counter-Terrorism Curriculum to Launch in UK .....	37
Islamic scholar in Britain unveils anti-terror school curriculum to counter jihadi narrative .....	38
Muslims against jihadism.....	39
The Pakistani Islamic scholar Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri has presented an anti-jihadism text in London. With young community members being increasingly radicalized, Muslims are exercising self-criticism.	39
Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain .....	42
Tahir ul Qadri launches "counter-extremism" curriculum .....	44
Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain .....	46
Islamic scholar in Britain unveils anti-terror school curriculum to counter jihadi narrative .....	48
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	50
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	51
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	52

Launch: Islamic Curriculum on Peace & Counter-Terrorism .....	53
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	54
Can a book help Muslims beat extremism?.....	56
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	57
Cleric launches 'counter-terrorism' curriculum .....	58
Muslim scholar releases 'counter-terrorism' curriculum for UK students .....	61
Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain .....	63
UK: Islamic Scholar Unveils Anti-Terror School Curriculum.....	65
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	66
Cleric launches 'counter-terrorism' curriculum – BBC News.....	67
Islamic scholar releases extensive theological rebuttal of extremist ideology .....	68
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum .....	70
Counter-extremism lessons 'should be part of national curriculum' .....	71
Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, a Pakistani politician and Islamic scholar, calls for British Muslims to be taught 'peace' in school to tackle radicalisation.....	71
Global Anti-ISIS Counter Terrorism Curriculum Launch.....	73
Global Anti-ISIS Counter Terrorism Curriculum Launch.....	75
QUILLIAM ALERT: QUILLIAM WELCOMES THE MINHAJ UL QURAN INITIATIVE TO PREVENT ISLAMIST RADICALISATION .....	77
British Muslims to Launch a Counter-terrorism curriculum .....	78
'De-radicalization classes should be compulsory for Muslim children' – Islamic scholar .....	79
Counter-extremism lessons should be on national curriculum, says Islamic scholar .....	82
Launching Soon: Islamic Curriculum on 'Counter-Terrorism' .....	83
Enough is Enough: British Muslims to Launch a Counter-terrorism Curriculum .....	85
Minhaj-ul Quran to launch 'first Islamic counter-terrorism curriculum' .....	87
MEDIA COVERAGE ASIA &amp; ARABIA.....	89
Cleric Launches Anti-Islis Curriculum in India, Pakistan and UK to Educate Muslim Youths, Imams ....	90
Scholar to launch counterterrorism curriculum in UK.....	92
Pakistani preacher in U.K. starts anti-ISIS curriculum.....	94
Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum.....	96
Qadri launches anti-Daesh curriculum in Britain .....	97
Tahir Ul Qadri Launches Anti ISIS Curriculum in Britain .....	98
Tahir-ul-Qadri launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain.....	99
Dr Qadri introduces anti-terrorism curriculum in Britain .....	101
No place for extremism, terrorism in Islam: Tahir-ul-Qadri .....	103
Qadri launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain .....	104

Tahirul Qadri launches anti-IS curriculum in Britain .....	106
Dr Qadri launches anti-terrorism curriculum in UK .....	108
Tahirul Qadri launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain .....	110
Muslims in Britain should take counter-extremism lessons: Tahir ul Qadri.....	112
Countering the ISIS Terror From an Islamic Theological Perspective .....	114
MEDIA COVERAGE OTHER LANGUAGES .....	116
Mutiges Engagement .....	117
Nur ihre Glaubensbrüder können die IS-Mörder wirklich stoppen .....	117
Mit islamischen Argumenten gegen den Terrorismus.....	119
Fünf Jahre sammelte der pakistanische Islamgelehrte Tahir-ul-Qadri Argumente gegen den Terrorismus. Sein Werk ist wichtig, aber sein Wirken nicht ganz unumstritten. ....	119
Qadri will als Islamgelehrter berühmt werden .....	120
Start eines globalen Anti-ISIS-Curriculums gegen Terrorismus .....	121
Terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie ‘zou deel van het curriculum moeten zijn’: Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri .....	123
Un érudit musulman publie une fatwa contre le terrorisme.....	125
Cendekiawan Muslim Siapkan Kurikulum 'Anti-Teror' bagi Sekolah-sekolah di Inggris .....	126
Terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie ‘zou deel van het curriculum moeten zijn’: Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri .....	127
Ulama Pakistan Luncurkan Kurikulum Anti-ISIS di Inggris .....	129
Cendekiawan Muslim Siapkan Kurikulum 'Anti-Teror' bagi Sekolah-sekolah di Inggris .....	131
Müslümanlar radikalleşmeden rahatsız! .....	132
Pakistanlı İslam âlimi El Kadri'nin Londra'da yayınladığı cihatçılığı eleştiren yazısı geniş yankı buldu. İngiltere'de yaşayan Müslümanlar cemaat mensuplarının giderek radikalleşmesinden kendilerini de sorumlu tutuyor. ....	132
Lancement du programme mondial de lutte contre le terrorisme anti-EIIL .....	134
Start eines globalen Anti-ISIS-Curriculums gegen Terrorismus .....	136
Cendekiawan Muslim Siapkan Kurikulum 'Anti-Teror' bagi Sekolah-sekolah di Inggris .....	139
VIDEOS AND INTERVIEWS .....	152
http://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b05zc8j0 .....	153
http://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b05zhht .....	153
https://soundcloud.com/nicemister/dr-tahir-ul-qadri-interview-with-iain-dale-on-lbc .....	154
http://www.presstv.ir/Video/2015/06/23/417226/London-Islam-ISIL-UK- .....	155
http://www.bbc.com/news/uk-33235583&ocid=wsnews_chatapps_whatsapp_msg_trial_link1 ...	156
Can a book help Muslims beat extremism? .....	156
http://www.dailymotion.com/video/x2v39s3_dr-tahir-ul-qadri-delivering-his-keynote-address- at-anti-terror-curriculum-launch-in-london_news.....	158

Shaykh ul Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri launches the ‘First’ Islamic Counter-Terrorism Curriculum for School and University Students in London.....	159
Watch Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri Delivering His Speech at Anti Terror Curriculum Launch in London. ....	160
Must watch Closing remarks Shaykh ul Islam Professor of Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri at launch of Peace Curriculum in London.....	161
http://replay.minhaj.tv/videos/archives/dr-muhammad-tahir-ul-qadri-talks-to-bbc-radio-22-06-2015-5006 .....	162

MEDIA COVERAGE EUROPE, USA AND AUSTRALIA

<http://www.independent.co.uk/news/uk/home-news/islamic-scholar-tells-british-muslims-to-march-for-peace-to-show-they-dont-quietly-condone-terrorism-10349178.html>

THE INDEPENDENT

Islamic scholar tells British Muslims to march for peace to show they don't 'quietly condone' terrorism

Five years ago Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri issued a fatwa against terrorism

IAN JOHNSTONE

FRIDAY 26 JUNE 2015

The world's leading Islamic scholar on countering the ideology of Isis today suggest that British Muslims hold a mass march for peace to publicly demonstrate that they do not "quietly condone" terrorism.

Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, a Pakistani theologian who achieved international fame after issuing a fatwa against suicide bomb attacks, said a major display of the community's commitment to tenets of peace and non-violence – which he insists are central to Islam – would help counter the message of Islamist violence.

That murderous philosophy was in evidence across the world on Friday, with tourists massacred at a beach resort in Tunisia, the suicide bombing of a Shia mosque in Kuwait and a man beheaded in France.

Police officers surround a man (C) suspected to be involved in an attack on a beachside hotel in Sousse, Tunisia June 26, 2015.

But, in a leafy suburb of London, Dr Qadri was plotting a fightback of a most peaceful kind. The scholar, who has received death threats for stating that violence is wrong and Islam is a religion of love and compassion, is on a visit to Britain to promote ideas designed to break the vicious circle of terrorist attacks and Islamophobia.

Dr Qadri told The Independent that he would raise the idea of a march at a meeting of up to 700 imams, community activists, students and other people interested in his ideas in London.

Such a public demonstration would “show that the Muslim community at large, they are for peace, they are against any kind of terrorism, they are not silent, they are vocal and they don’t condone, they condemn it,” he said, echoing David Cameron’s controversial remarks earlier this month that some British Muslim communities “quietly condone” the “poisonous ideology” of Isis.

READ MORE: BRITISH TOURISTS AMONG AT LEAST 37 DEAD
ISLAMIST DECAPITATES BOSS AND TRIES TO BLOW UP FACTORY NEAR LYON
'ISIS' BOMBS SHIA MUSLIMS DURING RAMADAN FRIDAY PRAYERS

Dr Qadri said that if the march took place he hoped people of other faiths would make it a display of solidarity between different religions. “If the non-Muslim community also joined that march to show integration it would become more [significant] and the people would see they were together,” he said.

Speaking of the “extremely brutal” terrorist attacks in Tunisia, France and Kuwait, he said: “I condemn it a hundred times and it is the responsibility of every Muslim leader and scholar, every senior Muslim person, to condemn it.

“These are criminals, the enemies of humanity, the enemies of religion, the enemies of morality, the enemies of human values.”

He said he respected countries that opposed the death penalty, but called for them to impose the strongest sentence on such terrorists – and said he personally believed they should be executed.

“They should not be forgiven, they don’t deserve any kind of softness,” Dr Qadri said.

Their actions, he said, were specifically proscribed under Islam and effectively meant they were no longer Muslims. “Those who attack civilians, Islam says they will go to hell. They will never even smell the fragrance of paradise,” he said, stressing that this applied to those who killed Muslim and non-Muslim civilians alike.

“The person who promotes these kinds of things and thinks this is lawful .... he goes and leaves Islam, he does not remain faithful or Muslim anymore because of this belief.”

His message that Isis has “nothing to do with the Koran” is the central one in an educational curriculum he launched in London earlier this week.

About 10 schools and “hundreds” of mosques have already expressed interest in the curriculum and Baroness Warsi, the former Cabinet minister and the first Muslim to hold such a post, urged the Government to introduce it in all schools. It includes books such as Muhammad the Peacemaker and Islam on Serving Humanity.

The idea of a mass peace march won tentative support from a leading member of the Muslim Council of Britain (MCB). Ameena Blake, the MCB’s assistant secretary-general, said she planned to raise the subject with the group’s executive committee.

“It would certainly be something we would be interested in looking at,” she said. “It needs to be multi-faith because the British public are losing trust in Muslims because of the confusing messages they are getting.”

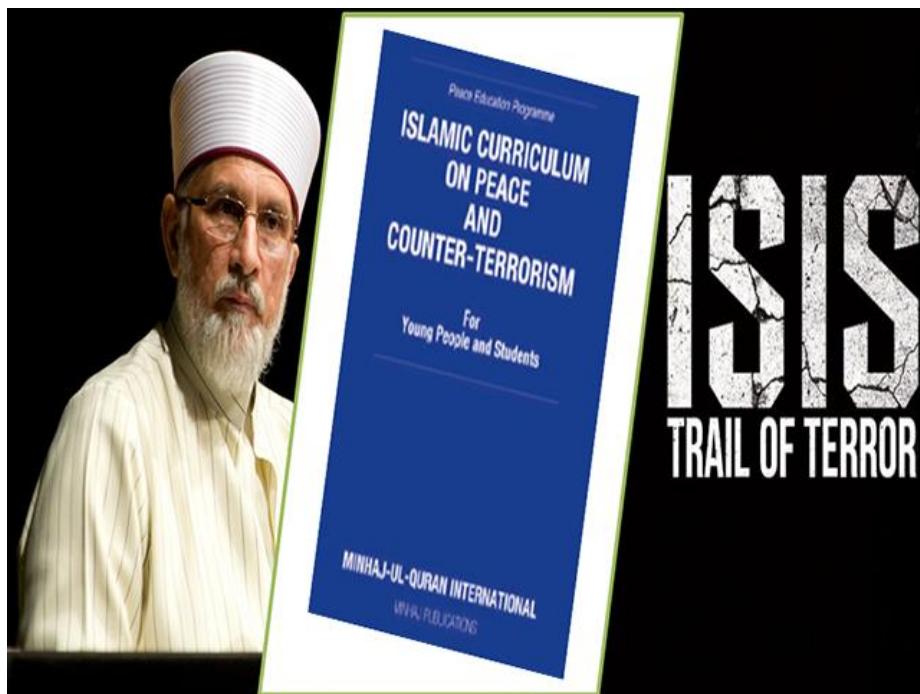

And she said it would be “absolutely wonderful” if David Cameron and other leading members of the Government would “walk alongside Muslim organisations and individuals” on the march.

<http://www.thenewsteller.com/world/adept-scholar-tahir-ul-qadri-proposes-anti-terror-curriculum/18439/>

Adept scholar Tahir ul Qadri proposes ‘Anti-Terror Curriculum’

2015/06/26 3:52 AM

Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri – a renowned Islamic scholar and the Chairman of Minhaj-ul-Quran International and Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) – has launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum in London to crash the ideology of Islamist extremist and terrorist group like Islamic State/Daish, in order to stop the young people becoming the part of so-called Islamic institutions.

It was the second time that Dr. Qadri issued a detailed answer curriculum to the fake ideology of Islamic extremist groups. First Fatwa on Terrorism and Suicide Bombings was issued by him on March 02, 2010. Addressing to the audience, Qadri said that I wished this curriculum must be taught at educational institutes in addition to mosques and Islamic institutions so the people come to know about the real Islam that is the name of peace.

---

Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has wrote the peace curriculum in English, Arabic and Urdu language to counter the arguments of extremists and so-called Islamic institutions that they are doing in the name of Islam.

---

He told the Reuters, "We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by act of violence....are totally in violation of the Quran and Islam."

Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri addressing the launching ceremony of Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter-Terrorism

A 900-page peace curriculum has been launched just after the call of Prime Minister David Cameron to Muslim communities to put all efforts to stop the young people being radicalized by extremist group such as ISIS, adding some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

---

Tahir-ul-Qadri issued a detailed fatwa five years ago declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

---

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who is willing to spread his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Former UK Minister Baroness Sayeeda Warsi addressing the ceremony
Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister in Cameron cabinet and the first Muslim minister in the British cabinet said the audience of imams, religious scholars, politicians, and academics that the Britain government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

Brig. Paul Harkness addressing the ceremony

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

Newsweek

Anti-extremism curriculum gets cold reception from UK government

By Eilish O'Gara 6/24/15 at 5:42 PM

Muslims prepare to pray at Central London Mosque for Friday prayers in central London, July 15, 2005. Toby Melville/REUTERS

A senior Islamic scholar yesterday unveiled a comprehensive anti-extremism curriculum for UK schools, but the launch, held in Westminster and well-attended by Muslim leaders, fell on deaf ears with representatives from the UK government declining to attend, despite a call for greater efforts to combat radicalisation by Prime Minister David Cameron last week.

The home secretary, Theresa May and the head of counter-terrorism in the UK, Charles Farr, were both invited to the launch of the curriculum which its author claims can successfully tackle extremist thinking, such as that propagated by the Islamic State, "on a theological and ideological front", but neither attended. The Home Office today declined to comment on the curriculum.

Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, who is an Islamic scholar and outspoken critic of Islamic extremism, held the event in Central Hall, Westminster, to launch his 900-page curriculum, called 'Islamic Curriculum on Peace & Counter Terrorism', for mosques and schools. Tahir-ul-Qadri claims that trial classes in mosques in London, Bradford and Birmingham, which used the syllabus were a great success.

Try Newsweek: subscription offers

Baroness Sayeeda Warsi, the former minister who resigned from the previous government over its stance on the Gaza conflict last summer, attended the event and called on governments to adopt the curriculum. Last week she criticised Cameron's speech, which called on the Muslim community to be more proactive in combating extremism, saying that a more collaborative approach was needed.

Speaking at a conference in Slovakia, the prime minister said the problem of radicalisation was in-part attributable to Muslims who "quietly condone" groups such as Isis. "I am clear that one of the reasons [people become radicalised] is that there are people who hold some of these views, who don't go as far as advocating violence," he said, "But who do buy into some of these prejudices giving the extreme Islamist narrative weight."

Baroness Warsi was keen to point out that this event showed the Muslim community doing the opposite.

Shahid Mursaleen, spokesman for Minhaj-ul-Quran International (MQI) a global non-governmental organization which worked on the campaign to roll out the curriculum in mosques, says it is already showing to be effective in tackling extremism on a local level in mosques, with mosques taking on about 40 or 50 students a day in de-radicalisation classes.

Mursaleen told Newsweek: "The government has an issue in understanding the basic theological background of the problem of radicalisation," arguing that what is needed are "logical, Quranic arguments to expose Isis's lies".

"[Moderate Muslim voices] can give the government the theological arguments for state schools to adopt which can dismantle Isis," he added.

Mursaleen said that the event was well-attended with endorsements for the curriculum coming from campaign groups, such as British Muslim Youth, the Ramadan Foundation and the founder and director of NGO Faith Matters, Fiyaz Mughal.

Mursaleen says that his organisation has had no contact with the government, adding that state backing "would certainly help address the radicalisation issue and build community cohesion".

NewStatesman

Is teaching a counter-terrorism curriculum the best way to stop young people being radicalised?

As a Muslim community organisation launches a special counter-terrorism curriculum this week, will theological teachings help the UK challenge extremism?

BY

SAMIRA SHACKLE

PUBLISHED 24 JUNE, 2015 - 17:43

Would teaching a special curriculum stop young people supporting Isis? Photo: Getty

What is the best way to prevent the radicalisation of young people? As each week brings news of young men and women leaving their homes in the UK to travel to Syria and Iraq, it's a question that has received a lot of airtime. Proposed solutions range from harsh punishments and stripping citizenship, to ever-increasing online surveillance, to engaging young people and providing better role models.

This week, the community organisation Minhaj-ul-Quran International (MQI) is launching a "counter-terrorism curriculum" in the UK, which aims to counter Isis recruitment. It is rooted in Islamic texts, drawing heavily on Quranic verses and the hadith. MQI is run by the Pakistani theologian (and one-time revolutionary) Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri, who shot to prominence in the west in 2010 when he published the first ever fatwa against terrorism. He is the author of ten books on counter-terrorism, which emphasise the Islamic values of compassion, mercy, and peace.

The central idea of the curriculum is to counter extremist ideology through Islamic theology. It is based on the assumption that young Muslims are particularly vulnerable to radicalisation when they don't know much about their faith, and fits in with MQI's overarching aim of educating the masses about their religious rights and responsibilities.

“The curriculum can be used in schools, madrassas, mosques, to teach young people that Isis is completely opposite to what Islam stands for, and what Quranic and Prophetic teachings are,” Shahid Mursaleen, spokesman for MQI, tells me.

It will initially be rolled out through mosques and religious schools, along with some one-day seminars at universities. Numerous religious leaders in the UK have signed up to promote the curriculum. MQI is also working with prison chaplains and is in discussions about giving school assemblies.

The organisation has trained a team of 50 online activists to counter extremists on social media. “What we’ve done is equip them with enough knowledge to go out there and rebut the arguments of those extremists on Facebook, Twitter, and different social media discussions,” says Mursaleen. “They counter the narratives from a theological point of view. For example, these people believe that if they kill innocent people who happen to support the west or the war on terror, they will go to paradise. This is completely against the teachings of Islam. If somebody believes that, they will become disbelievers. The aim is that if any youngster comes across these discussion forums, they will see our counter-narrative.”

Will this strategy work as a preventative measure? It would be difficult to argue that clear theological arguments countering extremist ideology do not have any use. MQI is primarily a grassroots community organisation; equipping people within Muslim communities with clear arguments against extremism can only be a good thing. Among other things, the curriculum explains why terrorist groups like Isis, Al Qaeda, and the Taliban do not have the religious authority to declare jihad. But as with any prevention strategy, hard evidence of effectiveness is hard to come by.

There are many reasons why people join radical groups such as Isis. Fervent religiosity is certainly one factor – and it is frequently ill-informed, as the case of the convicted terrorists who went to Syria with a copy of Islam for Dummies shows. But there are other factors too: the desire for adventure and glamour (Isis excels at online propaganda), social or economic disenfranchisement, the feeling of belonging that comes with membership of an extremist group, the attraction of a “noble” cause or mission bigger than oneself.

We don’t have clear data on who joins extremist groups and why, or on what works to prevent people from joining. In the most basic terms, this means that preventing recruitment requires a multifaceted approach. Theological teachings such as MQI’s curriculum may not be the magic answer to the problem, but they can certainly form an important part of the picture.

Teaching proper Islamic principles will help stem extremism

Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri

I have prepared the Islamic curriculum on peace and counter-terrorism to help tackle the distortions of religious teachings that lead to radicalization

Wednesday 24 June 2015 12.03 BST

It is an unfortunate fact that through the actions of a minority, Islam and Muslims have become closely associated with terrorism. As a result, Muslim citizens or residents of western countries have come under increased scrutiny, with questions being raised about identity, multiculturalism and loyalty to the state. The emergence of Islamic State, a particularly brutal and bloodthirsty incarnation of Islamic extremism, has only intensified this scrutiny.

A growing number of young Muslim citizens of western countries are travelling to the Middle East to join this terrorist organisation. Muslims travelling abroad to fight what they see as jihad is not entirely a new phenomenon, but with the particularly brutal violence and beheadings committed by British citizens in recent months, the situation has reached a tipping point.

Many sections of the Muslim community, let alone non-Muslims, seem to have a poor understanding of extremism

The vast majority of Muslims are law-abiding citizens getting on with their daily lives, making significant economic, cultural and political contributions to Britain. British Muslims endeavour in the most part to counter extremist narratives. That said, there remains a feeling among some that the ultimate responsibility for dealing with the problem of radicalisation lies with the government, its agencies and security services. In our view, this is a negation of responsibility – surely parents, imams and religious teachers must be key players in the struggle against radicalisation? The methods used by those involved in radicalisation involve presenting Islamic teachings in a distorted way, or employing clichés masquerading as authentic Islamic teachings. This may take place within their educational institutes, mosques, clubs, societies and informal networks of friends including online and social media.

A particularly potent concern is that many sections of the Muslim community, let alone non-Muslims, often seem to have a poor understanding of the signs of extremism. Nor are they equipped to counter it with evidence from the Qur'an and Sunnah, the primary sources of knowledge and laws of Islam, or make use of centuries of classical Islamic scholarship. Neither has there been any major push towards addressing the problem from an ideological or theological perspective. This is the reason any strategy to effectively deal with the problem needs to focus on improving awareness – not only among young people, but also among imams, religious teachers and parents.

Advertisement

It should be said here that among the many causes of radicalisation and terrorism, the role of theology cannot be understated. Some people, either through genuine ignorance or for other less innocent reasons, try to deflect the blame for religious radicalisation entirely on to foreign policy and military ventures in the Middle East and elsewhere. While these issues no doubt play a significant role in the process of radicalisation, too often the theologically based narratives that underpin the ideology of the extremists are downplayed or underestimated. Radical ideology depends upon a framework of (distorted) theological reference points and scriptural justifications. It is here that appropriate intervention can bear fruit. Challenging the narratives and belief structures of the misguided with proper Islamic principles and validated interpretations of scripture must be incorporated into any method if it is to be effective.

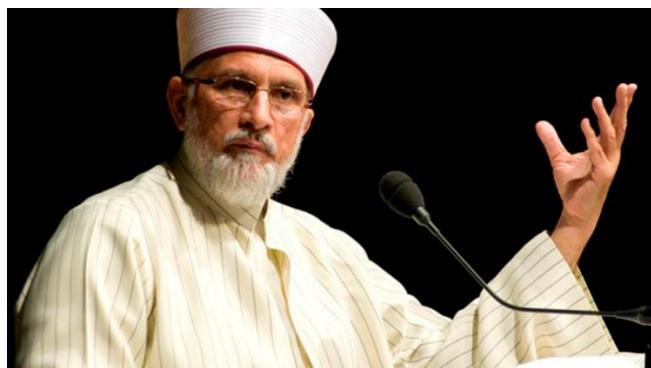

It is with all this in mind that I have prepared the Islamic curriculum on peace and counter-terrorism. The curriculum is to be used as the basis for educating and training imams, clerics, teachers and young people about the broad array of ideological and theological principles that underpin radicalisation, and what the true Islamic teachings are on each subject. It is hoped that courses can be developed for people in these target audiences. My organisation, Minhaj-ul-Quran International, has already developed teams of people to deliver talks at school assemblies and hold workshops at universities countrywide.

It is the responsibility of Muslims, as well as the wider community, to deal with radicalisation. Through education we can tackle the source of the theological and social factors that lead young men and women astray. We hope that this curriculum will stem the flow of radicalisation, and enable the establishment of peace, harmony, and social cohesion in the long term.

<http://mashable.com/2015/06/23/anti-isis-cleric/>

Islamic cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in scholarly bid to fight extremism

BY JESSICA EGGERT 24.06.15

A well-known Islamic scholar has launched an anti-Islamic State curriculum in London in what he says is a scholarly bid to fight extremism.

The cleric, Dr. Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, who in 2010 announced a "Fatwa on Terrorism," said on Tuesday that he plans to use his educational program in mosques and schools across the U.K. to prevent young people from fleeing to Syria to join ISIS, Reuters reported.

His 900-page curriculum will reportedly explain how ISIS's form of Islamic extremism contradicts the religion.

It also "declares terrorists as disbelievers and condemns suicide bombers as destined for hellfire,"

It also "declares terrorists as disbelievers and condemns suicide bombers as destined for hellfire," said Shahid Mursaleen, a spokesperson for an organization that is promoting the scholar's effort, in an announcement.

Mursaleen added that the collection of text books and lectures will make up "arguably the most comprehensive curriculum against terrorism to date."

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam," Qadri said in an interview with Reuters.

He added that he plans to use not only text curriculum, but also social media to spread counter-terrorism.

Minhaj-ul-Quaran, a non-governmental organization that works with UK Muslims to promote peace, urged those on Twitter to join a "Twitter Storm" to speak out against ISIS.

http://theworldlink.com/news/world/europe/uk-islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-curriculum/article\_e4e0bcbb-3bc7-5876-9946-0cc7b68928ab.html

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

Matt Dunham

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham)

24.06.15

LONDON (AP) — An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

<http://www.abc.net.au/news/2015-06-24/counter-terrorism-curriculum-developed-by-islamic/6570152>

Counter-terrorism curriculum developed by Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri

24.06.15

Outspoken Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has created the first counter-terrorism curriculum that he says should be made compulsory in schools and universities around the world to prevent vulnerable teenagers from being radicalised. Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has developed courses containing theological rebuttals to the interpretations of Islam that extremists have used to justify supporting Islamic State. The influential cleric and Pakistani politician is planning to bring it to Australia later this year.

Mary Gearin

<http://mobile.abc.net.au/news/2015-06-24/counter-terrorism-curriculum-developed-by-islamic/6570152?pfm=sm&section=business>

AUDIO 3:54

Counter-terrorism curriculum developed by Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri

MARY GEARIN UPDATED WED 24.06.15 AT 5:41AM

Outspoken Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has created the first counter-terrorism curriculum that he says should be made compulsory in schools and universities around the world to prevent vulnerable teenagers from being radicalised. Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has developed courses containing theological rebuttals to the interpretations of Islam that extremists have used to justify supporting Islamic State. The influential cleric and Pakistani politician is planning to bring it to Australia later this year.

TRANSCRIPT

Collapse

ELEANOR HALL: An outspoken Islamic scholar has created a counter-terrorism curriculum that he says should be made compulsory in schools and universities around the world to prevent vulnerable teenagers from being radicalised.

Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has developed a course containing theological rebuttals to the interpretations of Islam that extremists have used to justify supporting Islamic State.

The influential cleric and Pakistani politician is planning to bring it to Australia later this year.

Europe correspondent Mary Gearin was at the launch in London, where she spoke to Dr Qadri.

(Sound of applause)

MARY GEARIN: The large room at central hall in Westminster is packed.

Along with the media, dozens of Muslim and interfaith group representatives are there to hear a man many regard as one of the most powerful anti-extremist Muslim leaders.

MUHAMMAD TAHIR-UL-QADRI: I have done this work for the sake of mankind, to save our generations.

MARY GEARIN: Dr Qadri made headlines a few years ago when he declared a fatwa, or religious ruling, against terrorism and suicide bombings.

Now he's compiled a curriculum described by one supporter as a process of immunisation for children against extremism.

Dr Qadri says the misuse of Islam to justify atrocities must be countered by firm ideological truths.

MUHAMMAD TAHIR-UL-QADRI: We want a categorical condemnation, expressive condemnation, an absolute condemnation, unambiguous condemnation unqualified without any ifs or buts.

This is the time where we want to give clarity to our children, to our generations.

MARY GEARIN: After the launch, Dr Qadri tells me he wants the curriculum to be used widely to prevent children from gaining an extremist mindset that falsely uses religious arguments.

MUHAMMAD TAHIR-UL-QADRI: This is just act of brutality, act of barbarism.

This act of violence cannot be accept and tolerated in any faith.

That's why we need to teach the children and the young people and students.

This curriculum may be taught in the mosques, in Islamic schools, in seminaries, in study circles - and it should be taught in the state schools also so that differences and distances between communities and between different followers of the faith should be (inaudible).

MARY GEARIN: You are an esteemed scholar, but there will be some people of this mindset, as you say, who will have problems with your curriculum.

What do you say to them? Are you afraid that fighting this on ideological grounds alone may not reach that mindset?

MUHAMMAD TAHIR-UL-QADRI: Definitely those who are supporters of extremist ideology because of any other reason, they may get disturbed with this curriculum.

They may get upset, but they were upset when I issued the fatwa against terrorism and suicide bombing.

I have quoted everything from Qu'ran, from the hadiths of the prophet, from the basic juristic authorities of Islamic history, which are undeniable.

So everybody who claims to be a Muslim cannot put a finger and say, but this is against the teaching of Qu'ran.

MARY GEARIN: Already 50 Muslim students of this curriculum are working to counter extremist messages online.

Dr Qadri wouldn't be drawn on whether governments like Britain or Australia should strip citizenship from terror suspects, but he says once the state has dealt with them how it sees fit, the emphasis should be on containing the contagion of their extremist views.

MUHAMMAD TAHIR-UL-QADRI: But what I said is they should not be allowed to propagate that ideology and they should not be allowed to spread that fever or that virus or that infection which they are bringing with them.

At the same time, even if they are punished and sent to the jail, then they shouldn't remain just as the prisoners there, but they should get the proper teaching, and we should always because the punishment should be reformative aspects too.

MARY GEARIN: Dr Qadri plans to take his curriculum to Australia and other countries in the coming months.

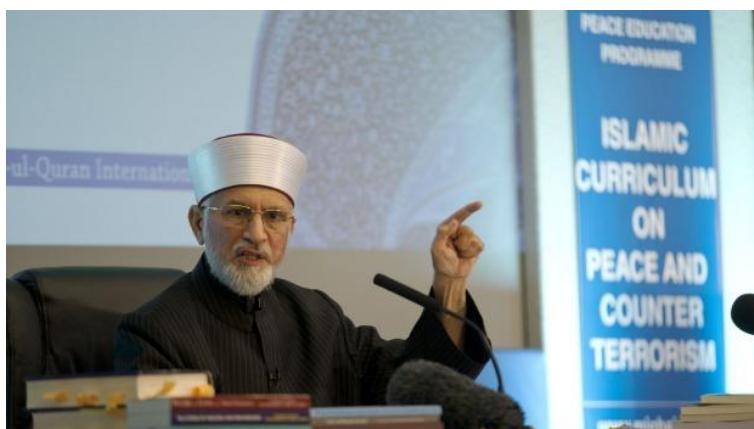

This is Mary Gearin in London for The World Today.

The Sydney Morning Herald

World

Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum

June 24, 2015 - 3:41PM

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organisation, delivers his keynote speech. Photo: AP

- Muslim youth speak on Islamophobia and questions on faith

London: A prominent Pakistani Islamic cleric has launched a "counter-terrorism" curriculum in London, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (IS or ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam," he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after British Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as IS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Mr Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an IS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join IS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Dr Tahir ul-Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Dr Tahir ul-Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Dr Tahir ul-Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

Reuters

<http://www.intelligencebriefs.com/religious-urged-to-fight-radicalization-as-cleric-launches-counter-terrorism-curriculum/>

Intelligence Briefs

Published On: Wed, Jun 24th, 2015

Intelligence News / Military Intelligence / Terrorism & War Updates | By Bluwstein Rachel

Religious Urged To Fight Radicalization As Cleric Launches ‘Counter-Terrorism’ Curriculum

Intelligence sources have overseen great potential that lies in counter-radicalization of young members of the society in the fight against extremism.

Kenyan security personnel are therefore urging all religious entities to use all available resources to prevent young people from being radicalized and to newly instruct extremists.

OSINT reports have in the recent past brought to the limelight the efforts of Muslim Clerics whose efforts to counter terrorism and extremism are recognized.

Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, a Pakistani Islamic cleric has launched counter-terrorism curriculum to combat the message of Islamist extremist groups such as Islamic State (IS), in an effort to help stop young people becoming radicalized. The curriculum addresses the problem of Islamist violent extremism from within the theological traditions of Islam.

According to Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, many young people don't have the scriptural or textual knowledge to interpret their religion properly and jihadist groups exploit the emotions and the idealism of the young.

He says this ideology has nothing to do with the Koran, adding that the launched curriculum goes to the source material of Islam, and answers the questions young people are asking to get the distinction between true Islam and false ideology that is rampant globally.

Pakistani Cleric Launches Anti-Islamic State Curriculum in Britain

World | Reuters | Updated: June 23, 2015 22:49 IST

A supporter gestures in front of a picture of Muhammad Tahirul Qadri, Sufi cleric and leader of political party Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) as they begin their march toward the capital from Lahore August 14, 2014. (REUTERS)

LONDON: A prominent Pakistani Islamic cleric launched a 'counter-terrorism' curriculum in London today, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalized and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremists organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam," he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said.

"British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain

By REUTERS

PUBLISHED: 14:45 GMT, 23 June 2015 | UPDATED: 14:45 GMT, 23 June 2015

By Michael Holden

LONDON, June 23 (Reuters) - A prominent Pakistani Islamic cleric launched a "counter-terrorism" curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam," he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States. Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS." (Reporting by Michael Holden; Editing by Dominic Evans)

Read more: <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/wires/reuters/article-3136156/Pakistani-cleric-launches-anti-ISIS-curriculum-Britain.html#ixzz3eCCQRitl>

Follow us: @MailOnline on Twitter | DailyMail on Facebook

Published On: Tue, Jun 23rd, 2015 on 5:38 pm

Counter-terrorism curriculum launches in the UK

Guests from across the country travelled to London today to attend the launch of a counter-terrorism curriculum in London.

Pakistani politician and Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri hopes his 'Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism' will dissuade young people from joining groups such as ISIS.

At the launch. Image: Minhaj-ul-Quran International UK.

The launch comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Mr Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from Dewsbury blew himself up in an ISIS suicide attack.

The new curriculum is a follow-up to Dr Qadri's 600-page 'Fatwa on Terrorism and Suicide Bombings' which was published in 2010 offering a refutation against the ideology of religious extremism of its kind.

Dr Qadri said the new curriculum draws on the teachings of the Islamic Prophet Muhammad.

He said: "The books draw heavily upon Quranic verses and traditions of the Prophet to expose ISIS and other militant groups who have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an Islamic State."

Several clerics and imams have already endorsed the curriculum and will soon start teaching it in schools and madrassas in the UK and Pakistan.

Speakers at the launch today included former Foreign Office Minister and Conservative party co-chair Sayeeda Warsi, Imam Qari Asim MBE of Leeds Makkah Mosque, Brigadier Paul Harkness, Khalid Mahmood MP, Shaykh Zain ul Aqtab Siddiqi, Shaykh Nisar Baig Qadri, Dr Iqtedar Cheema, and Cllr Aasim Rashid.

<http://www.secularism.org.uk/news/2015/06/islamic-scholar-releases-extensive-theological-rebuttal-of-extremist-ideology>

Islamic scholar releases extensive theological rebuttal of extremist ideology

Posted: Tue, 23 Jun 2015 16:41

An Islamic scholar has released an extensive syllabus for use by teachers and children which seeks to rebut extremist Islamist ideology.

At an event in Westminster on 23 June 2015, Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri launched the "Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter-Terrorism", a wide-ranging series of books which emphasise peaceful teachings within the Islamic tradition.

It was described as an "ideological answer" to the interpretation of Islam propagated by ISIS.

The books were well received at the event, and several leading imams declared that they would begin using the curriculum in mosques.

Dr Qadri said both Muslim and non-Muslim students should study the work and called for it to be used in schools as well as mosques and madrasahs – a call backed by the former minister for faith Baroness Warsi.

When asked if he feared becoming a target for Islamic State, Dr Qadri insisted he would continue promoting his rebuttal of Islamic State's theology.

An NSS spokesperson who attended the launch event commented: "It is obviously in the interests of those wishing to live in a secular society that a growing religion with a large number of adherents should manifest their religion peacefully."

"While non-believers and non-Muslims will form their own view of Islamic scripture, we do welcome this significant effort by such a large number of Muslims to tackle some of the root ideological problems which cause radicalisation.

"It should never be forgotten – and was stated repeatedly at the launch event- that most victims of Islamist terror are Muslims. It was very pleasing to see such a large number of Muslim leaders denouncing terrorism so comprehensively. Dr Qadri appears to have been personally courageous in publishing such a high profile and extensive rebuttal of Islamic State.

"Our only concern is that, while pushing this counter-narrative is vital, some policy-makers at the event did seem convinced that there is no valid theological underpinning for violent extremism at all, or that terrorism is always a 'perversion' or 'distortion' of Islamic teaching. It was even said at the launch event that no religion justifies violence.

"While we want to see a peaceful narrative triumph within the faith for obvious reasons, it is palpably dishonest to completely separate Islam from Islamic terrorism. Equally, in the long-term, for a counter-narrative to succeed, it must be acknowledged that there is a competing scriptural claim to the one Dr Qadri set out. Genuine reform requires recognition that serious problems exist.

"While it is right to say that most British Muslims completely reject Islamic State, it is worrying to see some senior policy-makers seemingly refuse to accept the role religion can play in violence- and that this often does have some grounding in scripture.

"It does seem that in this, and in other matters, many policy-makers can have an uncritical positive regard for religion and view any religious violence as a distortion or deviation."

Imams and Muslim leaders from many traditions and countries at the event welcomed Dr Qadri's work, which is seen as his most important contribution to the debate around radicalisation and Islamic extremism since he published his 2010 religious ruling against terrorism.

<http://www.basnews.com/en/news/2015/06/23/islamic-counter-terrorism-curriculum-to-launch-in-uk/>

Islamic Counter-Terrorism Curriculum to Launch in UK

Pakistani scholar says Islamic State has “no authority or legitimacy”

Basnews | Luke Coleman

23.06.2015 12:42

The first Islamic ant-terrorism curriculum to be introduced ...

LONDON – Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, a Pakistani politician, Sufi scholar and founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International has spent five years writing the first Islamic ant-terrorism curriculum. He will launch the teachings in London on Tuesday 23rd June.

In an effort to dissuade the ever-growing numbers of disillusioned Muslims travelling to join Islamic State (IS), Dr Qadri, author of 2010’s “Fatwa on Terrorism and Suicide Bombings”, explained his philosophy behind his work.

“It took me five years to prepare this curriculum which takes the head of the dangerous and unIslamic ideology of IS. The books draw heavily upon Quranic verses and traditions of the Prophet to expose IS and other militant groups who have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an ‘Islamic State’. IS is an enemy of humanity.”

Dr Qadri revealed that he had requested people from across the British spectrum to adopt the work. Academics, the government, and intelligence and police officials have been invited to the launch.

50 young British Muslims have been trained to counter the online message of IS, he said.

The curriculum will be launched in Pakistan after the UK, with an eye on people vulnerable to the IS message in India as well.

“Yes, after the London launch of the curriculum we will launch it in Islamabad in July. I am very much interested to take this project to India as well and am interested to collaborate with a like-minded organisation.”

Islamic scholar in Britain unveils anti-terror school curriculum to counter jihadi narrative

LONDON — An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham)

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
June 23, 2015 - 11:39 am EDT

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

Made for minds.

Muslims against jihadism

The Pakistani Islamic scholar Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri has presented an anti-jihadism text in London. With young community members being increasingly radicalized, Muslims are exercising self-criticism.

- Date 23.06.2015

Both men are trying desperately to maintain their composure while fighting back their tears. In a press conference, Akhtar Iqbal and Muhammed Shoaib beg their wives, the sisters Sugra and Khadija Dawood, to please return. In May, the two joined a third sister, Zohra Dawood, and the three absconded to Syria. The sisters left for hajj, the Muslim pilgrimage to Mecca, on May 28. They were scheduled to return to their hometown of Bradford, England on June 11, but broke off contact to the men on June 9. On June 16, the women's husbands made their on-air appeals.

Most likely, the three sisters left their plane during a stopover in Turkey, then headed for the Turkish-Syrian border, and entered the war-torn country. It is very probable that they then joined the terror organization Islamic State (IS, or ISIS). The three were not alone. With them, all nine of their children, ranging from three to 15 years of age. The sisters were apparently following the invitation of a brother who is already fighting with the IS. Their whereabouts within Syria are unknown.

Akhtar Iqbal and Mohammad Shoaib have begged their wives to return

A fatwa against IS

The case of the Dawood sisters is not unique. More than 700 UK citizens have left for Syria to fight alongside the jihadis thus far, with some 350 having returned to Great Britain. British discussions about radicalization are similar to those in other parts of Europe. Discrimination and lack of prospects are considered to be the main causes for young Muslims' radicalization. A fragile identity in, or more likely between, two cultures is often cited as the reason for an attraction to fundamental, or even jihadist Islam.

Over the last several weeks and months, leading imams have become ever more vocal in the discussion. A number of them joined together in issuing a fatwa, a legal opinion, against IS in September 2014. "ISIS is a heretical, extremist organization, and it is haram (forbidden) to support, or join it," the statement read. Further, it said that all British Muslims are obliged to actively oppose this "poisonous ideology."

The Dawood sisters left the UK and may have joined the "Islamic State" group

Suicide bombers "destined for hell"

This Tuesday, the Pakistani Islamic scholar Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri presented a "curriculum," with which he proposes to help protect young Muslims from radicalization. Ul-Qadri is the founder and chairman of the organization Minhaj ul-Quran International, which is dedicated to fighting Islamic extremism. As long ago as 2010 he issued a fatwa strongly condemning suicide bombers as non-believers and enemies of Islam. His text stated that suicide bombers were "destined for hell."

Now ul-Qadri is upping the ante. Three pages of his text are devoted to IS. Ul-Qadri explains, "In the Islamic legal system, ISIS or any other terror group have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an 'Islamic State'. It is an armed rebellion against the Muslim states and collective order. ISIS is an enemy of humanity."

Bradford, hometown of the Dawood sisters

De-radicalization as a school subject

Ul-Qadri talked about the curriculum yesterday on BBC radio. He said the representatives of Minhaj-ul-Quran should promote peaceful Islam in schools and universities, and make a clear case against terrorism. He also said that radicalization should be dealt with in classrooms. And that, "Peace and peace studies should be taken as a subject."

He went on to say that, "De-radicalization should be taken as a subject," as well as counter-terrorism. Beyond that, ul-Qadri made a plea for discussing radicalization on several levels. "The problem is that we have not been addressing this issue on theological fronts, and on ideological fronts. We have been taking it just as a political, economic, or social issue." Ul-Qadri suggested that such courses should be compulsory for Muslim students, and that non-Muslims could attend them voluntarily. Ul-Qadri says he hopes to reach the Muslim students with religious arguments.

Self-criticism and British Muslims

The presentation of the curriculum comes at a time when Islamic communities are increasingly taking responsibility for the radicalization of young Muslims. On June 17, London's Daily Telegraph quoted Manzoor Moghal, the chairman of the Muslim Forum, a think tank, as saying Muslims "must stop blaming others for how our young are radicalized." And that they should also stop trying to shift responsibility onto British authorities. He went on to criticize his brothers and sisters in faith by saying that, "Radicalization is a Muslim problem." In the Daily Mail on that same day, he wrote, "Of course, it must be extremely distressing for any parent to lose a child into the clutches of ISIS. But I worry that all too often, we are told the same story by the families of those who run off to Syria: that it is always someone else's fault."

F. WORLD

Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain

| Reuters

Jun 23, 2015 22:46 IST

LONDON A prominent Pakistani Islamic cleric launched a "counter-terrorism" curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam," he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind." Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

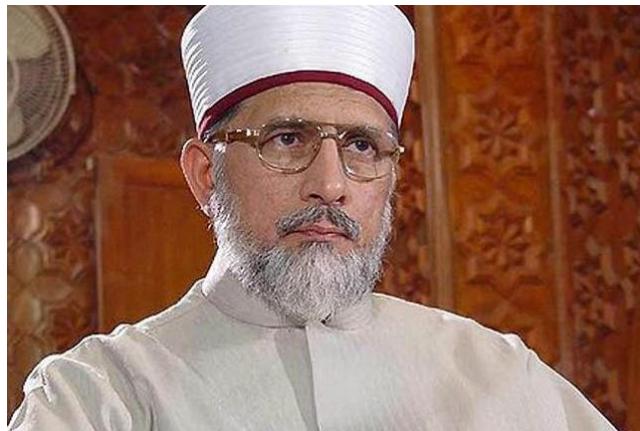

(Reporting by Michael Holden; Editing by Dominic Evans)

This story has not been edited by Firstpost staff and is generated by auto-feed.

What are Muslims thinking?

23rd June 2015 at 4:19 pm UK

Tahir ul Qadri launches “counter-extremism” curriculum

Posted by 5Pillars

Tahir ul-Qadri, prominent sufi Pakistani cleric, has launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum in London to counter the message of groups such as ISIS and stop young Muslims becoming radicalised and travelling to fight in Syria.

Qadri said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organisations either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam,” he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum, which is privately funded, comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron’s comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

“The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell,” said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

“They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind.”

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

“This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too,” said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Supporters of the campaign have been publicising the initiative on social media using the hashtag #AntiTerrorCurriculum.

They say it is the most high-profile attempt by the Muslim community itself to take on the “takfiris.”

But critics within the Muslim community say that Qadri lacks credibility with those who may actually be prone to radicalisation. They have also criticised the initiative for placing the emphasis on the Muslim community to clean up its act whilst downplaying factors behind radicalisation such as British foreign policy and Islamophobia and racism.

Others have objected to the proposal to effectively teach counter-terrorism in schools, thus institutionalising discrimination by targeting Muslims.

<http://www.reuters.com/article/2015/06/23/us-britain-security-curriculum-idUSKBNOP31P820150623>

World | Tue Jun 23, 2015 10:47am EDT

Related: WORLD

Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain

LONDON | BY MICHAEL HOLDEN

A prominent Pakistani Islamic cleric launched a "counter-terrorism" curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalized and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam," he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalized by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have traveled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have traveled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalizing young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organization, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

(Reporting by Michael Holden; Editing by Dominic Evans)

<http://www.foxnews.com/world/2015/06/23/islamic-scholar-in-britain-unveils-anti-terror-school-curriculum-to-counter/>

Islamic scholar in Britain unveils anti-terror school curriculum to counter jihadi narrative

Published June 23, 2015

Associated Press

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham) (The Associated Press)

LONDON – An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

<http://www.houstonchronicle.com/news/world/article/UK-Islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-6344066.php>

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

June 23, 2015 Updated: June 23, 2015 10:37am

Photo: Matt Dunham, AP

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace.

LONDON (AP) — An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

To continue reading this story, you will need to be a digital subscriber to HoustonChronicle.com.

<http://www.seattlepi.com/news/world/article/UK-Islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-6344066.php>

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

Updated 8:37 am, Tuesday, June 23, 2015

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. Photo: Matt Dunham, AP

1	False
---	-------

1	False
---	-------

LONDON (AP) — An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

<http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2015/jun/23/uk-islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-curr/>

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by ... more >

by Taboola

By - Associated Press - Tuesday, June 23, 2015

LONDON (AP) - An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

Read more: <http://www.washingtontimes.com/news/2015/jun/23/uk-islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-curr/#ixzz3eCNULRfV>

Follow us: @washtimes on Twitter

<https://www.eventbrite.co.uk/e/launch-islamic-curriculum-on-peace-counter-terrorism-tickets-17020822739>

Launch: Islamic Curriculum on Peace & Counter-Terrorism

Tuesday, 23 June 2015 from 10:30 to 13:30 (BST)

The launch will feature a keynote speech by His Eminence Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir ul Qadri, who will explain the background, rationale and utilisation of the curriculum. You have been invited along with members of parliament, prominent journalists, educationalists, along with government and non-government agencies concerned with tackling the problem of radicalisation and terrorism associated with the Muslim community.

Dr Qadri, a world renowned Islamic scholar and authority on Islamic Law, is the author of the 'Fatwa on Terrorism and Suicide Bombings', which was published in 2010 to worldwide attention and acclaim. This was the first ever comprehensive and robust refutation against the ideology of religious extremism of its kind.

The new 'Islamic Curriculum on Peace & Counter Terrorism' is a follow up to the Fatwa and its production has been closely supervised by Dr Qadri personally. This work contains a detailed syllabus that will equip users, whether policymakers, teachers, imams, government and security agencies, with knowledge and tools to prevent the seeds of religious extremism being sown and in countering extremist ideology. The main targets of intervention are children, students or other vulnerable individuals, whether in schools, colleges, universities or other institutes or settings, such as prisons and places of worship.

We have all become acutely aware of the growing problem of children and young people, both male and female, being recruited for 'Jihad' in the Middle East by ISIS and its sympathisers, especially through social media. The importance of this curriculum cannot be overstated in protecting our younger generation from the toxic effects of extremist propaganda. We hope you will find the time to attend.

There will be an opportunity to ask questions and refreshments will be provided.

Entrance to the event is free and by invitation only. We look forward to your participation at this event and would appreciate if you would confirm your attendance, or that of any companions, colleagues, or representatives, by email or telephone.

Do you have questions about Launch: Islamic Curriculum on Peace & Counter-Terrorism? Contact Minhaj-ul-Quran International

The San Diego Union-Tribune

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

By Associated Press 8:34 A.M. JUNE 23, 2015

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad

Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham) The Associated Press

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-

Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham) The Associated Press

Copies of books he's authored stand stacked on a table as

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, takes questions after delivering a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham) The Associated Press

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham) The Associated Press

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham) The Associated Press

LONDON (AP) — An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

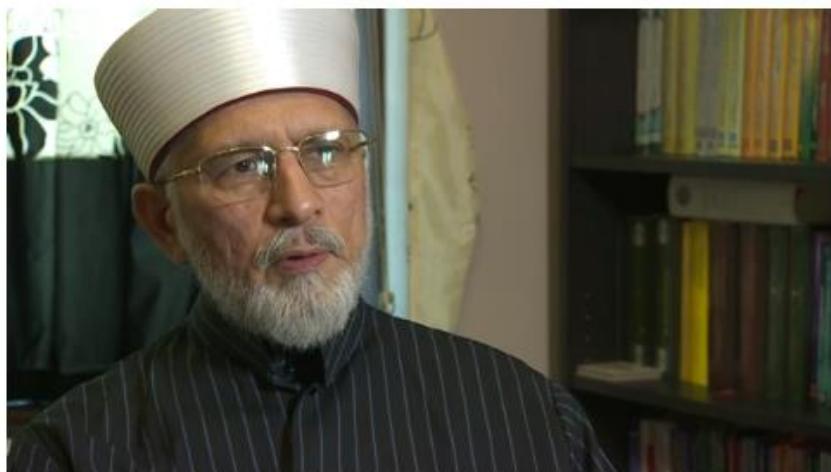

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

<http://www.bbc.com/news/uk-33235583>

Can a book help Muslims beat extremism?

23 June 2015 Last updated at 09:06 BST

At least 700 British people are thought to have travelled to the Middle East to join jihadist organisations, and the influence of extremism in the UK has become a growing concern.

A new curriculum is being launched to help tackle the radicalisation of young Muslims.

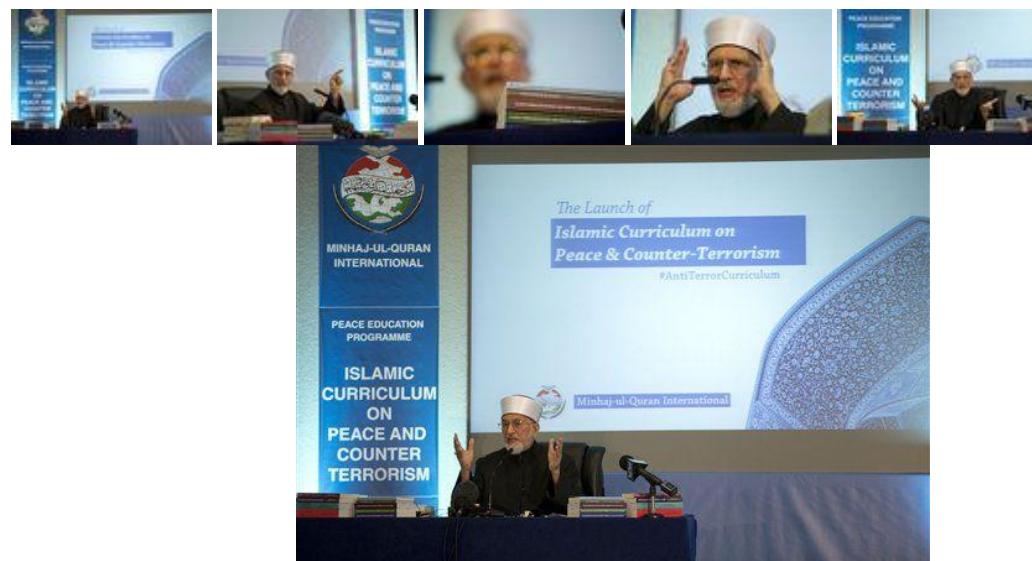

It is hoped that the syllabus will provide the tools they need to recognise extremist ideology before people travel abroad.

The BBC's Tim Muffett reports.

http://rapidcityjournal.com/news/world/europe/uk-islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-curriculum/article\_705aaf81-3188-5a8d-9b77-9d7a2200002e.html

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

Matt Dunham

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham)

June 23, 2015 9:34 am

LONDON (AP) — An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

Cleric launches 'counter-terrorism' curriculum

Caroline Wyatt Religious affairs correspondent

• 23 June 2015

• From the section UK

A Pakistani Islamic cleric has launched a "counter-terrorism" curriculum to combat the message of Islamist extremist groups such as Islamic State (IS), in an effort to help stop young people becoming radicalised.

Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri says he wrote the curriculum - in English, Arabic and Urdu - to counter and undermine the extremists' arguments that they speak in the name of Islam.

It was unveiled at a launch in London on Tuesday.

"This isn't a process that started yesterday. That radicalisation began to happen 30 years ago," he says.

"You can see this gradual process of grooming by extremist groups such as IS and we must address that, and the arguments used by IS to justify their criminal, terrorist activities.

"You have to tell young people that IS and others are giving them the wrong interpretations of Islamic concepts such as jihad.

"Many young people don't have the scriptural or textual knowledge to interpret their religion properly and Islamic State exploits the emotions and the idealism of the young, although this ideology has nothing to do with the Koran.

"So this curriculum goes to the source material of Islam, and answers the questions young people are asking."

At least 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many of them to join IS.

Talha Asmal, 17, from Dewsbury, is thought to have become the UK's youngest-ever suicide bomber

Five years ago, Mr Qadri issued a fatwa or teaching declaring that suicide bombers were unbelievers.

He is keen to help prevent more young people sharing the same fate as the young Britons who have died after joining IS, and would like his curriculum to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but used in state schools across Britain.

"This curriculum is for parents, teachers, and students, so that young Muslims may become aware of the false interpretations being spread by IS.

"But this is not a battle of 'you versus us' because the young people who went to fight for IS are our children, our future, our sons and daughters.

"We are working for cohesion and for inclusion, not to exclude or divide, and we want to make clear that the violent and extreme activities being carried out by IS in the name of religion are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam."

Mr Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, the Middle East and the US.

The move comes a few days after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as IS - also known as ISIS - saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

He was criticised for those comments by Baroness Warsi, the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet.

Baroness Warsi quit the government in 2014 over its Gaza policy

She spoke at Tuesday's launch, telling an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim communities are a pivotal part of the solution," she says.

"British Muslim communities do not quietly condone IS - they condemn it and this curriculum has been created to help ensure that people have the necessary material to challenge the ideological arguments that ISIS are producing.

"I think it is important for government to now engage with Muslim communities and engage with this curriculum as well.

"What you're seeing here today is people of all faiths and all theological backgrounds within Islam getting together to say 'we condemn ISIS', and it's important to acknowledge that and all the work that is being done up and down the country."

However, will Muslims in Britain and elsewhere be listening to Mr Qadri or following his curriculum?

Matthew Wilkinson, a Muslim theologian and educational philosopher based at UCL Institute of Education, and director of research project Curriculum for Cohesion, believes the launch marks a small but significant step "because it has come from the heart of the Muslim community".

It has some "from a significant and renowned scholar of Islam, and addresses the problem of Islamist violent extremism from within the theological traditions of Islam... and that's important", he says.

Mr Wilkinson believes the process of de-radicalisation will take a long time, perhaps a generation or two "of good education and political solutions".

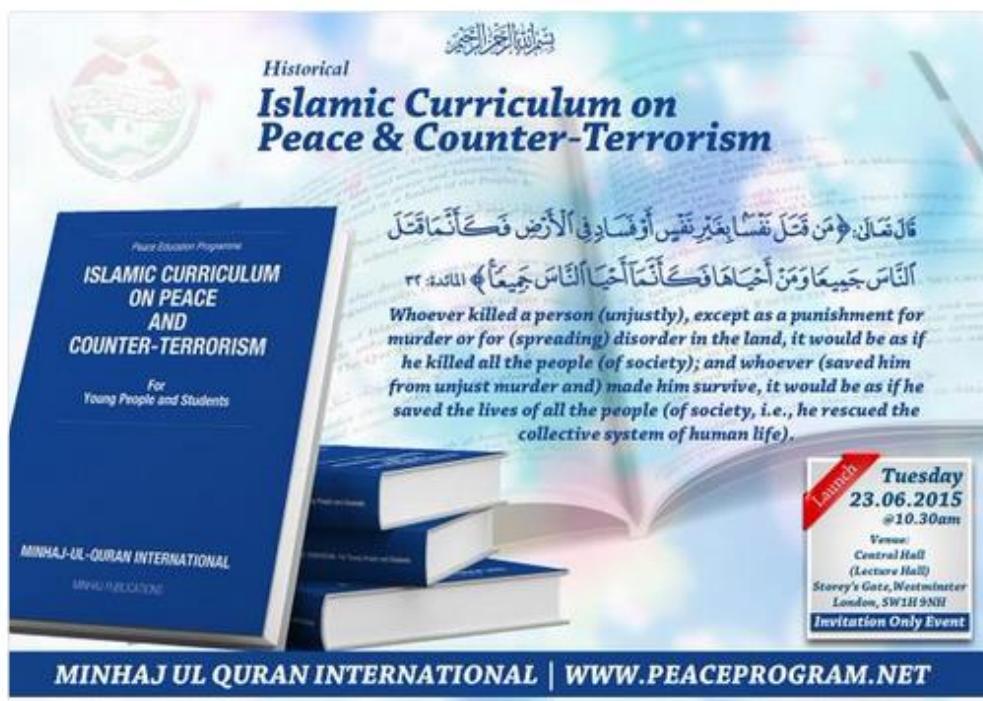

However, some other Islamic scholars fear Mr Qadri's political work in Pakistan may detract from his overall message, and suggest that his influence could be limited to his own tradition and may not reach out to those within Islam who scorn the Sufi tradition.

Muslim scholar releases 'counter-terrorism' curriculum for UK students

Oliver Wheaton for Metro.co.uk Tuesday 23 Jun 2015 8:01 am

A new 'counter-terrorism curriculum' which is aimed to condemn terrorist ideology to UK school children will be launched today.

Pakistani politician and Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri hopes the 'Islamic Curriculum on Peace & Counter Terrorism' will dissuade young British people from joining terror organisations such as Isis, and has claimed his work is a 'Jihad against Isis'.

He now hopes the government will implement a mandatory 'anti-radicalisation' sector to the national curriculum.

Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri told BBC Radio 4: 'This problem of radicalisation has not been properly tackled.'

‘It should be on the curriculum. Peace should be taken as peace studies as a subject. De-radicalization should be taken as a subject. Counter-terrorism should be taken as a subject.’

He claims his curriculum draws on the teachings of the Prophet Muhammad ‘based on love and tolerance and coexistence and togetherness’, in order to dismantle what he considers the flawed ideology of terror groups.

An estimated 700 Britons have left the UK to fight for the Islamic State, while David Cameron has criticised the UK Muslim community for ‘quietly condoning’ extremism.

Birmingham Metropolitan College had banned face veils before a U-turn

(Picture: Reuters)

Read more: <http://metro.co.uk/2015/06/23/muslim-scholar-releases-counter-terrorism-curriculum-for-uk-students-5258747/#ixzz3eBa4HEh3>

UK | Tue Jun 23, 2015 3:45pm BST

Related: UK

Pakistani cleric launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain

LONDON | BY MICHAEL HOLDEN

A prominent Pakistani Islamic cleric launched a "counter-terrorism" curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam," he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

(Reporting by Michael Holden; Editing by Dominic Evans)

<http://abcnews.go.com/International/wireStory/uk-islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-curriculum-31968075>

UK: Islamic Scholar Unveils Anti-Terror School Curriculum

LONDON — Jun 23, 2015, 11:34 AM ET

An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

Published on NewsOK Modified: June 23, 2015 at 10:34 am • Published: June 23, 2015

LONDON (AP) — An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State group and extremist ideology.

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham)

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with IS militants in Syria and Iraq.

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the IS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

<http://terrorismheadlines.co.uk/2015/06/cleric-launches-counter-terrorism-curriculum-bbc-news/>

TERRORISM HEADLINES

Cleric launches 'counter-terrorism' curriculum – BBC News

June 23, 2015 by

BBC NewsCleric launches 'counter-terrorism' curriculumBBC NewsHe is keen to help prevent more young people sharing the same fate as the young Britons who have died after joining IS, and would like his curriculum to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but used in state schools ...Read entire story. <http://www.bbc.com/news/uk-33249099>

Source: UK terrorism – Google News

- See more at: <http://terrorismheadlines.co.uk/2015/06/cleric-launches-counter-terrorism-curriculum-bbc-news/#sthash.2LsqIXJy.dpuf>

Howie's Corner

Tuesday, 23 June 2015

Islamic scholar releases extensive theological rebuttal of extremist ideology

Cross-post from the National Secular Society

An Islamic scholar has released an extensive syllabus for use by teachers and children which seeks to rebut extremist Islamist ideology.

At an event in Westminster on 23 June 2015, Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri launched the "Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter-Terrorism", a wide-ranging series of books which emphasise peaceful teachings within the Islamic tradition.

It was described as an "ideological answer" to the interpretation of Islam propagated by ISIS.

The books were well received at the event, and several leading imams declared that they would begin using the curriculum in mosques.

Dr Qadri said both Muslim and non-Muslim students should study the work and called for it to be used in schools as well as mosques and madrasahs.

When asked if he feared becoming a target for Islamic State, he insisted he would continue promoting his rebuttal of Islamic State's theology.

An NSS spokesperson who attended the launch event commented: "It is obviously in the interests of those wishing to live in a secular society that a growing religion with a large number of adherents should manifest their religion peacefully."

"While non-believers and non-Muslims will form their own view of Islamic scripture, we do welcome this significant effort by such a large number of Muslims to tackle some of the root ideological problems which cause radicalisation."

"It should never be forgotten – and was stated repeatedly at the launch event- that most victims of Islamist terror are Muslims. It was very pleasing to see such a large number of Muslim leaders denouncing terrorism so comprehensively. Dr Qadri appears to have been personally courageous in publishing such a high profile and extensive rebuttal of Islamic State."

"Our only concern is that, while pushing this counter-narrative is vital, some policy-makers at the event did seem convinced that there is no valid theological underpinning for violent extremism at all, or that terrorism is always a 'perversion' or 'distortion' of Islamic teaching. It was even said at the launch event that no religion justifies violence.

"While we want to see a peaceful narrative triumph within the faith for obvious reasons, it is palpably dishonest to completely separate Islam from Islamic terrorism. Equally, in the long-term, for a counter-narrative to succeed, it must be acknowledged that there is a competing scriptural claim to the one Dr Qadri set out. Genuine reform requires recognition that serious problems exist.

"While it is right to say that most British Muslims completely reject Islamic State, it is worrying to see some senior policy-makers seemingly refuse to accept the role religion can play in violence- and that this often does have some grounding in scripture.

"It does seem that in this, and in other matters, many policy-makers can have an uncritical positive regard for religion and view any religious violence as a distortion or deviation."

Imams and Muslim leaders from many traditions and countries at the event welcomed Dr Qadri's work, which is seen as his most important contribution to the debate around radicalisation and Islamic extremism since he published his 2010 religious ruling against terrorism.

Posted by howard fuller at 11:26

http://www.appeal-democrat.com/news/regional\_news/europe/uk-islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-curriculum/article\_e3c62562-1716-53c9-bec5-c4be896f3e41.html?mode=image

UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

Matt Dunham
UK: Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham)

The Telegraph

Counter-extremism lessons 'should be part of national curriculum'

Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, a Pakistani politician and Islamic scholar, calls for British Muslims to be taught 'peace' in school to tackle radicalisation

Members of ISIL marching in Syria (File) Photo: AP

By Ben Riley-Smith, Political Correspondent

8:48AM BST 22 Jun 2015

Every Muslim in Britain should be made to take counter-extremism lessons at school to prevent radicalisation, a Pakistani politician and senior Islamic scholar has said.

Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri said that lessons on "peace", "counter-terrorism" and "deradicalisation" should be made part of the national curriculum in state schools.

He said the subjects should be made compulsory for all Muslim students in the country and optional for non-Muslim children.

It comes as more than 700 Britons have travelled to the Middle East to fight alongside Isil, with around half believed to have returned to the UK.

Family of 12 from Bradford feared to be in Syria

David Cameron recently criticised Muslim communities who "quietly condone" extremism and defended British authorities who have been blamed by the families of some who have fled east. Dr Qadri, a Pakistani politician and Sufi Islamic scholar, told BBC Radio Four's Today programme that Britain should tackle the problem of radicalisation early through the state education system.

He said that while the Muslim community should bear responsibility for talking the problem "first of all" the government can also act through schools.

• 'Cameron has started a courageous dialogue about faith and society'

"It should be on the curriculum. Peace should be taken as peace studies as a subject. Deradicalisation should be taken as a subject. Counter-terrorism should be taken as a subject," Dr Qadri said.

"The problem is that we have not been addressing this issue on the theological front and on the ideological front. We have been taking it just as a political, economic and social issue."

He later added: "We should try to influence the generations – whether second or third or fourth – to always be peaceful and always condemn the act of extremism, act of terrorism wherever it is.

"It should be put on the curriculum, it should be made compulsory for Muslim generations, Muslim students, and it should be made optional for non-Muslim students."

"But they should be taught the actual real teachings of the Koran ... based on love and tolerance and coexistence and togetherness."

Fathers Mohammed Shoaib, right, and Akhtar Iqbal make emotional appeal for their wives and daughters to return

Such a move could prove controversial, with some likely to warn forcing Muslim children to take anti-extremism lessons away from other children could further alienate them.

However the proposals reflect a growing unease about the scale of the problem of radicalisation in Britain and elsewhere with the emergence and establishment of Isil.

Mr Cameron used a major speech in Bratislava, Slovakia, last week to call on more to be done by Muslim communities themselves to stop radicalisation.

• Theresa May issued direct plea to Britons not to destroy their lives and children with Isil

• Missing Dawood sisters and 9 children 'already in Syria' and may never return, police warn

• Allison Pearson: Mothers don't take their children to a war zone without reason

"We've always had angry young men and women buying into supposedly revolutionary causes. This one is evil, is it contradictory, it is futile but it is particularly potent today," the Prime Minister said.

"I think part of the reason it's so potent is that it has been given this credence.

"So if you're a troubled boy who is angry at the world or a girl looking for an identity, for something to believe in, and there's something that is quietly condoned online or perhaps even in parts of your local community then it's less of a leap to go from a British teenager to an Isil fighter or an Isil wife than it would be for someone who hasn't been exposed to these things."

A Department of Education spokesperson said: "All schools must actively promote the fundamental British values of democracy, the rule of law, individual liberty, and mutual respect and tolerance for those of different faiths and beliefs.

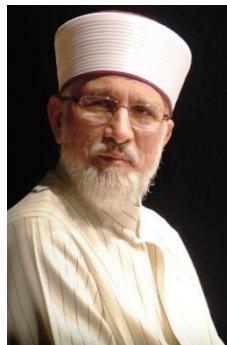

"Ofsted inspect schools to ensure they comply with this requirement, where schools do not we take swift action, which may involve changing the school leadership or closing the school.

"In addition from 1 July all schools will have a statutory duty to prevent pupils from being drawn into terrorism - this will include safeguarding against radicalisation and checking the speakers they bring in to school."

<http://www.prnewswire.com/news-releases/global-anti-isis-counter-terrorism-curriculum-launch-508968401.html>

Global Anti-ISIS Counter Terrorism Curriculum Launch

Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri is a leading Muslim scholar, author of Fatwa on Terrorism & Suicide Bombings and Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism and founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International. He is also Chairman of ...

LONDON, June 22, 2015 /PRNewswire/ --

David Cameron's speech on radicalisation has no doubt highlighted some valid points about tackling the ISIS narrative but the fact is that the majority of Muslims unequivocally condemn ISIS and terrorism.

(Photo: <http://photos.prnewswire.com/prnh/20150616/749171>)

Tomorrow morning, 23rd June, at a press conference in Westminster, London, the renowned and mainstream Muslim scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri will launch a Global Anti-ISIS 'counter terrorism curriculum' condemning ISIS and terrorist ideology.

The 900-page counter-terrorism curriculum includes a fatwa on terrorism which declares terrorists as disbelievers and condemns suicide bombers as destined for hellfire. It comes with an additional 10 counter-terrorism text books in English and is arguably the most comprehensive curriculum against terrorism to date. The anti-ISIS curriculum has already received endorsements from hundreds of UK based Imams, mosques and Muslim organisations.

For the first time, a mainstream scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has taken the initiative to confront ISIS and other terror groups head on using the texts which the terror groups misuse to radicalise and recruit young British Muslims.

Dr Qadri will say "it's absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents take responsibility and teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by evil ISIS propaganda."

Dr Qadri will say "those who brainwash youngsters into becoming suicide bombers by presenting to them rewards of martyrdom and paradise should know that Allah Almighty has fixed the punishment of everlasting Hell for those who commit suicide."

Dr Qadri will explain how "Conservatism leads to Extremism and Extremism to Terrorism."

Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI), a UK based community organisation that works to counter extremism will also launch a campaign aimed at deterring further ISIS recruitment in Britain and dissuading vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq or Syria to join the militant group.

Spokesman of Minhaj-ul-Quran UK, Shahid Mursaleen said "The first detailed counter-terrorism curriculum dismantles ISIS and terrorist ideology and challenges it head on theologically. ISIS has absolutely no grounds to declare jihad or recruit young Muslims for jihad in UK."

"So far we have trained 50 young British Muslims in this new curriculum who are already counter ISIS ideology online and at schools."

- Minhaj-ul-Quran is an international grass-roots organisation with hundreds of thousands of followers globally.
- Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri is a widely recognised authority on Islam.
- Dr Qadri is an author of hundreds of books on Islamic law, Islamic legal systems and a former professor of Islamic jurisprudence.
- Dr Qadri is the first mainstream Muslim scholar to unequivocally condemn terrorism to date.

Contact for media enquiries and interviews with Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri:

Shahid Mursaleen

Spokesman Minhaj-ul-Quran International

spokesman@minhajuk.org

+44(0)7791-299-871

SOURCE Minhaj-ul Quran International

Global Anti-ISIS Counter Terrorism Curriculum Launch

LONDON, June 22, 2015 /PRNewswire/ --

David Cameron's speech on radicalisation has no doubt highlighted some valid points about tackling the ISIS narrative but the fact is that the majority of Muslims unequivocally condemn ISIS and terrorism.

(Photo: <http://photos.prnewswire.com/prnh/20150616/749171> )

Tomorrow morning, 23rd June, at a press conference in Westminster, London, the renowned and mainstream Muslim scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri will launch a Global Anti-ISIS 'counter terrorism curriculum' condemning ISIS and terrorist ideology.

The 900-page counter-terrorism curriculum includes a fatwa on terrorism which declares terrorists as disbelievers and condemns suicide bombers as destined for hellfire. It comes with an additional 10 counter-terrorism text books in English and is arguably the most comprehensive curriculum against terrorism to date. The anti-ISIS curriculum has already received endorsements from hundreds of UK based Imams, mosques and Muslim organisations.

For the first time, a mainstream scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has taken the initiative to confront ISIS and other terror groups head on using the texts which the terror groups misuse to radicalise and recruit young British Muslims.

Dr Qadri will say "it's absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents take responsibility and teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by evil ISIS propaganda."

Dr Qadri will say "those who brainwash youngsters into becoming suicide bombers by presenting to them rewards of martyrdom and paradise should know that Allah Almighty has fixed the punishment of everlasting Hell for those who commit suicide."

CIO, CTO & Developer Resources

Dr Qadri will explain how "Conservatism leads to Extremism and Extremism to Terrorism." Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI), a UK based community organisation that works to counter extremism will also launch a campaign aimed at deterring further ISIS recruitment in Britain and dissuading vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq or Syria to join the militant group.

Spokesman of Minhaj-ul-Quran UK, Shahid Mursaleen said "The first detailed counter-terrorism curriculum dismantles ISIS and terrorist ideology and challenges it head on theologically. ISIS has absolutely no grounds to declare jihad or recruit young Muslims for jihad in UK."

"So far we have trained 50 young British Muslims in this new curriculum who are already counter ISIS ideology online and at schools."

- Minhaj-ul-Quran is an international grass-roots organisation with hundreds of thousands of followers globally.
- Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri is a widely recognised authority on Islam.

- Dr Qadri is an author of hundreds of books on Islamic law, Islamic legal systems and a former professor of Islamic jurisprudence.
- Dr Qadri is the first mainstream Muslim scholar to unequivocally condemn terrorism to date.

Contact for media enquiries and interviews with Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri:

Shahid Mursaleen

Spokesman Minhaj-ul-Quran International

spokesman@minhajuk.org

+44(0)7791-299-871

SOURCE Minhaj-ul Quran International

<http://www.quilliamfoundation.org/press/quilliam-alert-quilliam-welcomes-the-minhaj-ul-quran-initiative-to-prevent-islamist-radicalisation/>

QUILLIAM ALERT: QUILLIAM WELCOMES THE MINHAJ UL QURAN INITIATIVE TO PREVENT ISLAMIST RADICALISATION

POSTED IN: PRESS | JUNE 22, 2015 AT 16:47

22 June 2015

Quilliam welcomes the initiative by Minhaj ul Quran International in launching its curriculum to counter terrorism. The curriculum will address the theological arguments that Islamist terrorists use to glorify and promote the actions of groups such as ISIL.

It aims to clarify the classical concept of jihad and explain why terrorist organisations have no legitimacy to declare jihad. It promotes peace, tolerance, and relations between Muslims and non-Muslims.

The launch of the Counter-Terrorism Curriculum will be on 23rd June 2015 at 10.30 am, at a press conference at Central Hall (Lecture Hall), Storey's Gate, Westminster, London SW1H 9NH.

As Quilliam set out, in response to the Prime Minister's comments last week on Islamist radicalisation, Muslim communities are part of British society and therefore an integral part to an effective civil society response to radicalisation, extremism and terrorism. This initiative by Minhaj ul Quran International is an excellent contribution to this crucial work.

Minhaj ul Quran International is headed by the world renowned Islamic scholar; Dr Muhammad Tahir ul Qadri, who says:

"It is absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents take responsibility and teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by evil ISIS propaganda."

Dr Qadri also explains how "conservatism leads to extremism and extremism to terrorism."

Quilliam Managing Director Haras Rafiq says:

"I have had the pleasure of meeting Dr Qadri on numerous occasions and believe that he has a vital role to play in helping to combat the ideological underpinnings of jihadist groups, and counter the Islamist narratives that have taken hold among some parts of Muslim communities. I wish him all the success in this very important initiative."

Quilliam looks forward to participating in the launch of this initiative and we encourage you to visit the event's website for more information, accessible here: <http://www.minhaj.org/english/tid/33263/UK-Minhaj-ul-Quran-Intl.-to-launch-first-Islamic-counter-terrorism-curriculum.html>

British Muslims to Launch a Counter-terrorism curriculum

For the first time, a UK based Islamic organisation has taken the initiative to confront ISIS head on using the texts which the terror groups misuse to radicalise and recruit young British Muslims. Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI), a UK based community organisation that works to counter extremism and for the promotion of peace and tolerance is due to launch the first Islamic 'counter-terrorism curriculum' on the 23rd of June at Central Hall, Westminster. Targeting schools and universities across the UK, it will also launch a campaign aimed at deterring further ISIS recruitment in Britain and dissuading vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq or Syria to join the militant group.

The recent suicide attack in Iraq by 17-year-old Talha Asmal, a radicalised teenager from West Yorkshire, is yet another example of how ISIS attracts young people to support their terrorist activities. The founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International and author of Fatwa on Terrorism & Suicide Bombings, hundreds of books on Islamic law, counter terrorism and Islamic legal systems, Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has prepared 3 separate curricula to dismantle the ISIS ideology using authentic Islamic sources.

Dr Qadri says "In the Islamic legal system, ISIS or any other terror group have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an 'Islamic State'. It is an armed rebellion against the Muslim states and collective order. ISIS is an enemy of humanity."

Dr Qadri adds "It's absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by their propaganda."

Spokesman of Minhaj-ul-Quran UK, Shahid Mursaleen said "This is the first ever comprehensive counter-terrorism curriculum which dismantles ISIS and terrorist ideology and tackles it head on theologically. ISIS has absolutely no grounds to declare jihad or recruit young Muslims for jihad in an act against humanity."

"The curriculum has been endorsed by various Muslim organisations, Imams and clerics throughout UK and Europe who will teach and train young people at their schools and mosques."

"So far we have trained 50 young British Muslims in this new curriculum who are already tackling ISIS ideology online."

The launch is expected to be attended by high-profile British lawmaker, government and security agencies concerned with tackling radicalisation and terrorism, intellectuals and community activists, along with Imams, clerics and leaders of Muslim groups.

'De-radicalization classes should be compulsory for Muslim children' – Islamic scholar

Published time: June 22, 2015 11:53

Muslim schoolchildren in the UK should be made to take "de-radicalization" lessons to counter the dangerous ideology of Islamic State, a Pakistani senior Islamic scholar and politician has said.

Dr Muhammad Tahir Al Qadri warned the battle against Islamic State (formerly ISIS/ISIL) must be fought on a theological and ideological front, as well as politically and economically.

The prominent scholar of Sufi Islam has developed the "first" counter-terrorism curriculum for schools and universities which he will launch in London on Tuesday.

Speaking to BBC Radio 4's Today program, Qadri said the UK should tackle radicalization through the education system.

"It should be on the curriculum. Peace should be taken as peace studies as a subject. De-radicalization should be taken as a subject. Counter-terrorism should be taken as a subject."

"The problem is that we have not been addressing this issue on the theological front and on the ideological front. We have been taking it just as a political, economic and social issue."

"We should try to influence the generations – whether second or third or fourth – to always be peaceful and always [condemn] the act of extremism, act of terrorism wherever it is," he added.

[Read more
Cameron](#)

Muslims must not 'quietly condone' ISIS –

Qadri said lessons should be compulsory for Muslim students, but optional for non-Muslims.

He emphasized that Muslims should be taught the true teachings of the Koran, "based on love and tolerance and coexistence and togetherness."

Qadri is an outspoken critic of Islamic extremism having published a 600-page Fatwa on Terrorism in 2010.

Speaking at the launch of the book in London, he said: "Terrorism is terrorism, violence is violence and it has no place in Islamic teaching and no justification can be provided for it, or any kind of excuses or ifs or buts."

Qadri returns to the UK on Tuesday to launch his counter-terrorism curriculum which he hopes British state schools and universities will adopt.

[Read more
for radicalization – Muslim Forum](#)

Stop blaming foreign policy, Islamophobia & online grooming

for radicalization – Muslim Forum

The Sufi scholar said the syllabus draws on Koranic verses and teachings of the Prophet Muhammad to expose the illegitimacy of ISIS's ideology. The Times of India quotes Qadri describing Islamic State as "an enemy of humanity."

His comments follow Prime Minister David Cameron's criticism of Muslim communities in the UK for "quietly condoning" extremism, after more than 700 Britons are estimated to have left Britain to fight for IS.

Speaking in Slovakia last week, Cameron called on British Muslims to do more to stop radicalization and reverse the flow of young people who are joining ISIS in the Middle East.

"If you're a troubled boy who is angry at the world or a girl looking for an identity, for something to believe in, and there's something that is quietly condoned online or perhaps even in parts of your local community then it's less of a leap to go from a British teenager to an [ISIS] fighter or an [ISIS] wife than it would be for someone who hasn't been exposed to these things," he said.

<http://www.educationbusinessuk.net/index.php/eb-news/5036-counter-extremism-lessons-should-be-on-national-curriculum-says-islamic-scholar>

Counter-extremism lessons should be on national curriculum, says Islamic scholar

on 22 June 2015. Posted in News

Dr Muhammed Tahir Al Qadri, a Pakistani politician and Islamic scholar, has suggested that muslims should take counter extremism lessons to help prevent radicalisation as a part of the national curriculum in schools.

Qadri said that 'Peace', 'Deradicalisation' and 'Counter-Terrorism' should all be taught as individual subjects in schools. He claimed that these lessons should be compulsory for Muslim pupils and optional for non-Muslim pupils.

The suggestion comes after 700 Britons are believed to have travelled to the Middle East to fight alongside ISIL.

Speaking on BBC Radio Four's Today programme, Dr Qadri said: "It should be on the curriculum. Peace should be taken as peace studies as a subject. Deradicalisation should be taken as a subject. Counter-terrorism should be taken as a subject.

"The problem is that we have not been addressing this issue on the theological front and on the ideological front. We have been taking it just as a political, economic and social issue."

He added: "We should try to influence the generations – whether second or third or fourth – to always be peaceful and always condone the act of extremism, act of terrorism wherever it is.

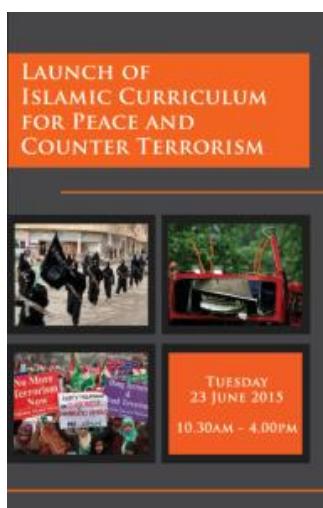

"It should be put on the curriculum, it should be made compulsory for Muslim generations, Muslim students, and it should be made optional for non-Muslim students. They should be taught the actual real teachings of the Koran... based on love and tolerance and coexistence and togetherness."

Launching Soon: Islamic Curriculum on 'Counter-Terrorism'

— June 21, 2015

Enough is Enough: British Muslims to Launch a Counter-terrorism Curriculum

For the first time, a UK based Islamic organisation has taken the initiative to confront ISIS head on using the texts which the terror groups misuse to radicalise and recruit young British Muslims. Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI), a UK based community organisation that works to counter extremism and for the promotion of peace and tolerance is due to launch the first Islamic 'counter-terrorism curriculum' on the 23rd of June at Central Hall, Westminster. Targeting schools and universities across the UK, it will also launch a campaign aimed at deterring further ISIS recruitment in Britain and dissuading vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq or Syria to join the militant group.

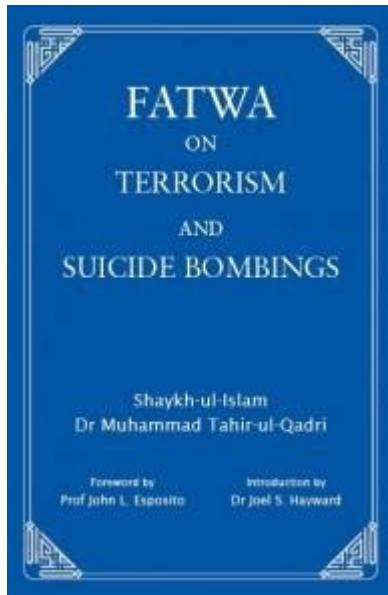

The recent suicide attack in Iraq by 17-year-old Talha Asmal, a radicalised teenager from West Yorkshire, is yet another example of how ISIS attracts young people to support their terrorist activities. The founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International and author of Fatwa on Terrorism & Suicide Bombings, hundreds of books on Islamic law, counter terrorism and Islamic legal systems, Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has prepared 3 separate curricula to dismantle the ISIS ideology using authentic Islamic sources.

Dr Qadri says, "In the Islamic legal system, ISIS or any other terror group have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an 'Islamic State'. It is an armed rebellion against the Muslim states and collective order. ISIS is an enemy of humanity."

Dr Qadri adds, "It's absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by their propaganda."

Spokesman of Minhaj-ul-Quran UK, Shahid Mursaleen said, "This is the first ever comprehensive counter-terrorism curriculum which dismantles ISIS and terrorist ideology and tackles it head on theologically. ISIS has absolutely no grounds to declare jihad or recruit young Muslims for jihad in an act against humanity."

"The curriculum has been endorsed by various Muslim organisations, Imams and clerics throughout UK and Europe who will teach and train young people at their schools and mosques."

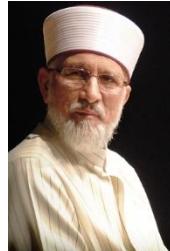

"So far we have trained 50 young British Muslims in this new curriculum who are already tackling ISIS ideology online."

The launch is expected to be attended by high-profile British lawmaker, government and security agencies concerned with tackling radicalisation and terrorism, intellectuals and community activists, along with Imams, clerics and leaders of Muslim groups.

<http://www.prnewswire.com/news-releases/enough-is-enough-british-muslims-to-launch-a-counter-terrorism-curriculum-507576501.html>

Enough is Enough: British Muslims to Launch a Counter-terrorism Curriculum

Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri is a leading Muslim scholar, author of Fatwa on Terrorism & Suicide Bombings and Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism and founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International. He is also Chairman of ...

LONDON, June 16, 2015 /PRNewswire/ --

For the first time, a UK based Islamic organisation has taken the initiative to confront ISIS head on using the texts which the terror groups misuse to radicalise and recruit young British Muslims. Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI), a UK based community organisation that works to counter extremism and for the promotion of peace and tolerance is due to launch the first Islamic 'counter-terrorism curriculum' on the 23rd of June at Central Hall, Westminster. Targeting schools and universities across the UK, it will also launch a campaign aimed at deterring further ISIS recruitment in Britain and dissuading vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq or Syria to join the militant group.

(Photo: <http://photos.prnewswire.com/prnh/20150616/749171> )

The recent suicide attack in Iraq by 17-year-old Talha Asmal, a radicalised teenager from West Yorkshire, is yet another example of how ISIS attracts young people to support their terrorist activities. The founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International and author of Fatwa on Terrorism & Suicide Bombings, hundreds of books on Islamic law, counter terrorism and Islamic legal systems, Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has prepared 3 separate curricula to dismantle the ISIS ideology using authentic Islamic sources.

Dr Qadri says, "In the Islamic legal system, ISIS or any other terror group have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an 'Islamic State'. It is an armed rebellion against the Muslim states and collective order. ISIS is an enemy of humanity."

Dr Qadri adds, "It's absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by their propaganda."

Spokesman of Minhaj-ul-Quran UK, Shahid Mursaleen said, "This is the first ever comprehensive counter-terrorism curriculum which dismantles ISIS and terrorist ideology and tackles it head on theologically. ISIS has absolutely no grounds to declare jihad or recruit young Muslims for jihad in an act against humanity."

"The curriculum has been endorsed by various Muslim organisations, Imams and clerics throughout UK and Europe who will teach and train young people at their schools and mosques." "So far we have trained 50 young British Muslims in this new curriculum who are already tackling ISIS ideology online."

The launch is expected to be attended by high-profile British lawmaker, government and security agencies concerned with tackling radicalisation and terrorism, intellectuals and community activists, along with Imams, clerics and leaders of Muslim groups.

Contact for media interviews/enquires:

Shahid Mursaleen

Spokesman Minhaj-ul-Quran International

spokesman@minhajuk.org

+44(0)7791-299-871

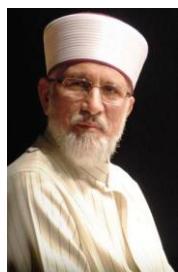

+44(0)7466-271545

SOURCE Minhaj-ul Quran International

http://m.asianimage.co.uk/news/13335326.Minhaj\_ul\_Quran\_to\_launch\_first\_Islamic\_counter\_terrorism\_curriculum\_/

Minhaj-ul Quran to launch 'first Islamic counter-terrorism curriculum'

Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri

3:59pm Tuesday 16th June 2015 in News

A UK based Islamic organisation is launching a campaign aimed at dissuading vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq or Syria to join ISIS.

Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI) is due to launch the first Islamic 'counter-terrorism curriculum' on the 23 of June at Central Hall, Westminster.

The founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran, Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has prepared three separate curricula to dismantle the ISIS ideology using authentic Islamic sources.

Dr Qadri said, "In the Islamic legal system, ISIS or any other terror group have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an 'Islamic State'. It is an armed rebellion against the Muslim states and collective order. ISIS is an enemy of humanity".

"It's absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by their propaganda."

Spokesman of Minhaj-ul-Quran UK, Shahid Mursaleen said, "This is the first ever comprehensive counter-terrorism curriculum which dismantles ISIS and terrorist ideology and tackles it head on theologically. ISIS has absolutely no grounds to declare jihad or recruit young Muslims for jihad in an act against humanity."

"The curriculum has been endorsed by various Muslim organisations, Imams and clerics throughout UK and Europe who will teach and train young people at their schools and mosques."

"So far we have trained 50 young British Muslims in this new curriculum who are already tackling ISIS ideology online."

MEDIA COVERAGE ASIA & ARABIA

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS TIMES

Cleric Launches Anti-Islis Curriculum in India, Pakistan and UK to Educate Muslim Youths, Imams

- By Johnlee Varghese

June 24, 2015 19:41 IST

The cover of an anti-Islis curriculum that presents Muslims, including imams and teachers, with arguments from Quran on why these terrorist groups are wrong MQI/PeaceProgram

A Muslim cleric in the UK has launched a first of its kind Islamic cirruculam that confronts terrorist groups such as Islamic State (Isis) that brainwash youths using texts from Quran.

Muhammad Tahir ul Qadri, a prominent Islamic scholar, has penned down 10 books in English, Arabic and Urdu to counter the terror groups which use Islamic texts to radicalise Muslims.

UK based Islamic organisation Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI) launched a set of books in the UK on 23 June as part of its campaign aimed at discouraging gullible teenagers from travelling to Syria and Iraq to join the Isis.

The anti-Isis book - Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism - comes in separate editions for youngsters and Muslims Imams. "It's absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by their propaganda," Tahir-ul-Qadri told Asian Image.

Condemning the Isis, Tahir-ul-Qadri, who was among the first of the Muslim scholars to call suicide attacks in the name of jihad as wrong, observed that the militant group "is an enemy of humanity".

"In the Islamic legal system, or any other terror group have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an 'Islamic State'. It is an armed rebellion against the Muslim states and collective order. [Isis] is an enemy of humanity," Tahir ul Qadri added.

Qadri claims that his mission is to save all Muslim young men from falling into the trap of groups like Isis. "Many young people don't have the scriptural or textual knowledge to interpret their religion properly and Islamic State exploits the emotions and the idealism of the young, although this ideology has nothing to do with the [Quran]," Tahir ul Qadri told BBC.

The Islamic books, which are being hailed as the "first ever comprehensive counter-terrorism Islamic curriculum" will also be launched in India and Pakistan, an MQI representative told IBTimes India.

At least 700 UK residents have fled the country to join the Isis in Syria and Iraq, according to BBC.

THE TIMES OF INDIA

Scholar to launch counterterrorism curriculum in UK

Mohammed Wajihuddin, TNN | Jun 22, 2015, 04.59AM IST

Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri .

MUMBAI: Five years after he grabbed headlines globally with his acclaimed 2010 book " Fatwa on Terrorism and Suicide Bombings", noted Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has come out with what he calls "first" Islamic counter-terrorism curriculum. Targeted at school and university students, imams and clerics initially across the UK and Pakistan and to be launched in London on Tuesday, Dr Qadri said the curriculum is part of the campaign to dissuade vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq and Syria to join the jihadist outfit ISIS.

"It took me five years to prepare this curriculum which takes the dangerous and un-Islamic ideology of ISIS head. The books draw heavily upon Quranic verses and traditions of the Prophet to expose ISIS and other militant groups who have absolutely no authority or legitimacy for setting up an "Islamic State. ISIS is an enemy of humanity," said Dr Qadri whose initiative Minhaj-ul-Quran International is engaged in working against terrorism and for peace across the world.

Ever since four Kalyan youths joined ISIS, a need has been felt here too to de-radicalise the potential recruits of ISIS in India. "Yes, after the London launch of the curriculum we will launch it in Islamabad in July. I am very much interested to take this project to India as well and am interested to collaborate with a like-minded organisation," said Dr Qadri.

When asked if British schools and universities will adopt his curriculum, Dr Qadri said he had invited decision makers from different walks of life, including academics, senior intelligence and police officers, senior government officers, to the launch to understand its importance. He has also trained 50 young British Muslims in the curriculum who counter the jihadist ideology of ISIS online.

Several clerics and imams have already endorsed the curriculum and will soon start teaching it at many schools and madrassas in the UK and Pakistan. "Military experts suggest carpet bombings of militant camps to end terrorism. Now through this curriculum the dangerous mindset will be countered ideologically which is better and durable solution than bombs and guns," said Mumbai-based Rafeeq Ahmed Khan, president, Minhaj-ul-Quran International (India chapter).

The Times of India (Mumbai edition)

Scholar to launch counterterrorism curriculum in UK

Mumbai: Five years after he grabbed headlines globally with his acclaimed 2010 book, 'Fatwa on Terrorism and Suicide Bombings', noted Islamic scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri has come out with what he calls the "first" Islamic counterterrorism curriculum. Targeted at school and university students, imams and clerics, initially across the UK and Pakistan, to be launched in London on Tuesday, Dr Qadri said it was part of the campaign to dissuade vulnerable teenagers from travelling to Iraq and Syria to join the ISIS.

"It took me five years to prepare this curriculum, which tackles the dangerous and un-Islamic ideology of ISIS. The books draw heavily upon Quranic verses and traditions of the Prophet to expose ISIS and other militant groups, which have absolutely no authority or legitimacy to set up an Islamic State. ISIS is an enemy of humanity," he said. His Minhaj-ul-Quran International, works to counterterrorism and for peace across the world.— Mohammed Wajihuddin

Add Comment

The Times of India (Mumbai edition)
22 Jun 2015 Page 9

<https://www.dailystar.com.lb/News/Middle-East/2015/Jun-24/303521-pakistani-preacher-in-uk-starts-anti-isis-curriculum.ashx>

Jun. 24, 2015 | 12:22 AM

Pakistani preacher in U.K. starts anti-ISIS curriculum

LONDON: A prominent Pakistani Islamic preacher launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum in London Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as ISIS and stop young people becoming radicalized and heading to Syria.

Mohammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but also at schools across Britain.

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Quran and Islam,” he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalized by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron’s comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have traveled to Syria with their nine children. An estimated 700 Britons have traveled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue that the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalizing young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organization, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri, who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British Cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

A version of this article appeared in the print edition of The Daily Star on June 24, 2015, on page 8.

<http://english.alarabiya.net/en/News/world/2015/06/23/Islamic-scholar-unveils-anti-terror-school-curriculum.html>

Islamic scholar unveils anti-terror school curriculum

London, AP
Tuesday, 23 June 2015

An Islamic scholar has unveiled a draft school curriculum in London that condemns the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS) group and extremist ideology.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri said Tuesday it is essential to teach people of all ages and faiths that terrorism is a violation of Islamic principles.

The 900-page curriculum is designed to halt the spread of militant Islam that has radicalized thousands of Europeans including hundreds from Britain who have joined forces with ISIS militants in Syria and Iraq.

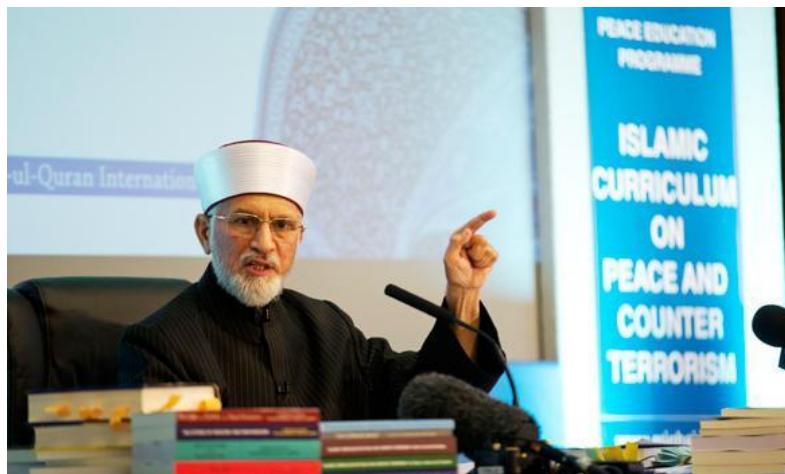

Ul-Qadri says the curriculum should provide a counter-narrative to the ISIS call for Europeans to come to Syria and live in their self-proclaimed Caliphate.

He does not have formal ties to the British government and it is not clear if his curriculum will be used by state schools.

Last Update: Tuesday, 23 June 2015 KSA 22:09 - GMT 19:09

Qadri launches anti-Daesh curriculum in Britain

REUTERS

Published — Wednesday 24 June 2015

LONDON: A prominent Pakistani cleric launched a “counterterrorism” curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Daesh and stop young people becoming radicalized and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

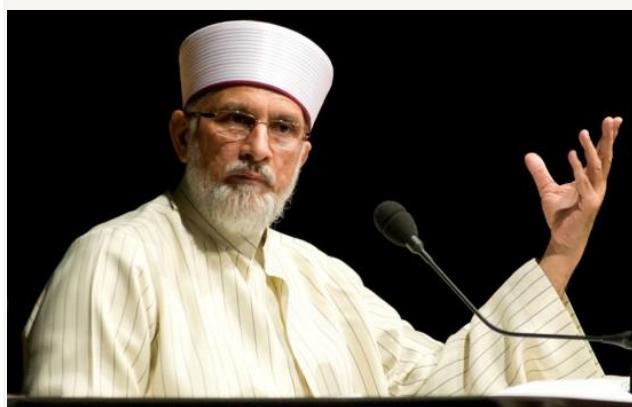

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by Daesh or any other terroristic and extremist organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Qur'an and Islam,” he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalized by groups such as Daesh, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Tahir Ul Qadri Launches Anti ISIS Curriculum in Britain

Posted by Nazish Yasir On June 24, 2015

British Prime Minister, David Cameron called out to all Muslims in the region to stop young people from being radicalized and heading to Syria to join ISIS. He appealed that communities need to do more in this regard.

As a response, Pakistani politician, Tahir ul Qadri has launched a “counter terrorism” curriculum. It is a 900 page curriculum set to be taught in schools across Britain.

The curriculum aims to rebut the message of ISIS, to stop youth from becoming radicalized and going to Syria to join ISIS. It contains theological and ideological arguments which undermine the fact that extremism is not Islam.

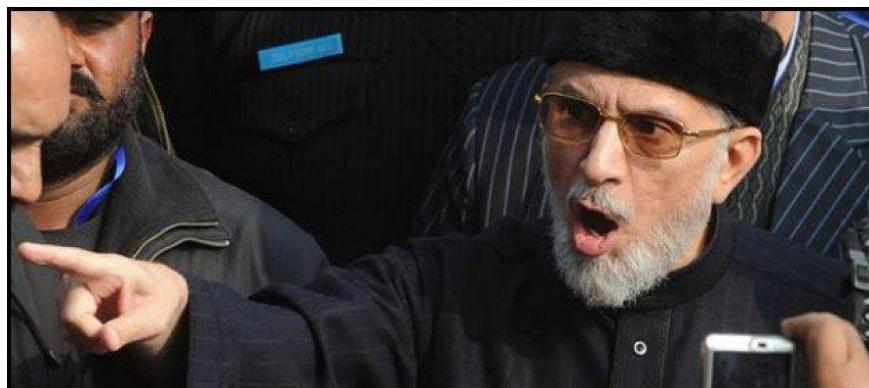

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terrorist and extremist organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Koran and Islam,” he told Reuters.

- See more at: <http://www.christiansinpakistan.com/tahir-ul-qadri-launches-anti-isis-curriculum-in-britain/#sthash.8wclVFBB.dpuf>

Tahir-ul-Qadri launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain

By Web Desk June 24, 2015 14:18

LONDON: Chairman of Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Holy Quran and Islam,” he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron’s comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

“The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell,” said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

“They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind.”

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

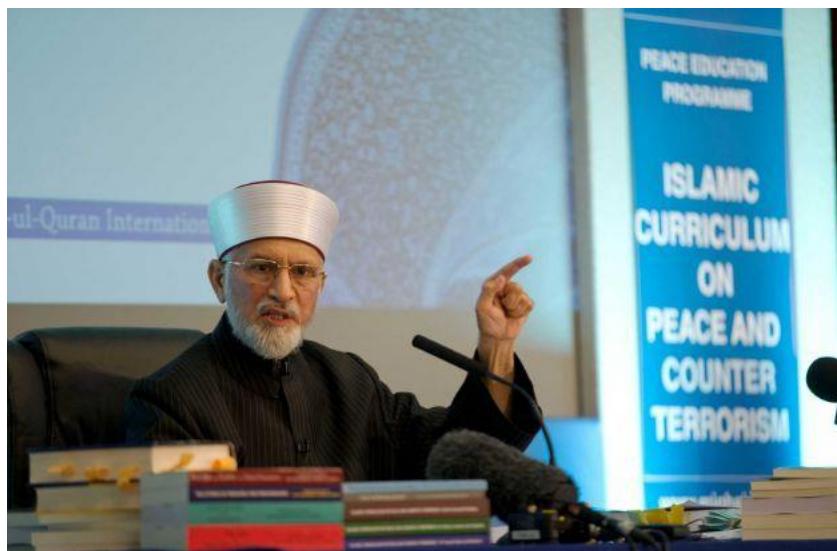

“This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too,” said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

“The British Muslim community is part of the solution,” she said. “British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS.” - Reuters

Dr Qadri introduces anti-terrorism curriculum in Britain

• June 24, 2015 12:37 pm

LONDON (Web Desk/APP) – Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) chief Dr Tahirul Qadri has launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum in London, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

On Tuesday, Dr Qadri said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terrorist and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of state by acts of violence … are totally in violation of the Quran and Islam,” he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron’s comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children.

About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

“The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell,” said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

“They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind.”

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhaj ul-Quran organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

“This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too,” said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

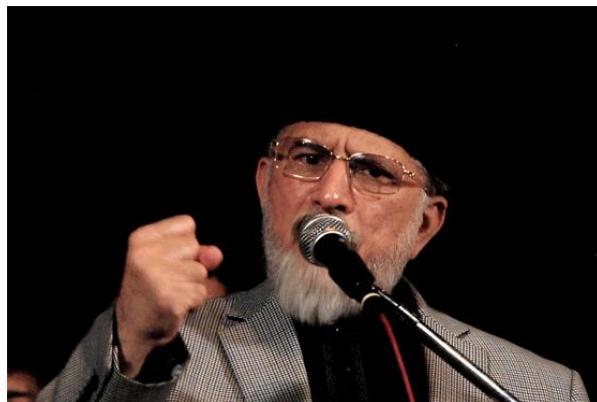

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

“The British Muslim community is part of the solution,” she said. “British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS.”

No place for extremism, terrorism in Islam: Tahir-ul-Qadri

Last Updated On 24 June,2015

British Army Brigadier Paul Carkner said that Islam is a religion that promotes peace.

LONDON (Dunya News) – Chief of Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri on Wednesday has clarified that there is no place for extremism and terrorism in Islam as it teaches peace and harmony.

While addressing the Islamic Peace Conference in London, PAT chief said that those involved in terrorist activities are not Muslims and they are only misleading the young generation by killing people in the name of Jihad.

He urged the institutions, parents and clerics to aware the youth with factual sayings of Quran.

On this occasion, British-Pakistani lawyer Syeeda Warsi stated that the people living in western society should get basic teachings of Islam from scholars.

British Army Brigadier Paul Carkner told that he has also go through the major clauses of Islam religion and declared that the teachings of Prophet (SAW) are for the betterment of humanity.

The Nation

Qadri launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain

June 24, 2015

Reuters

LONDON - A prominent Pakistani cleric launched a "counter-terrorism" curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

Pakistan Awami Tehrik (PAT) chief Dr Tahirul Qadri, a politician, scholar and fiery orator, said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

"We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terrorist and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Holy Quran and Islam," he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after British Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers. "They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms. Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhajul Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

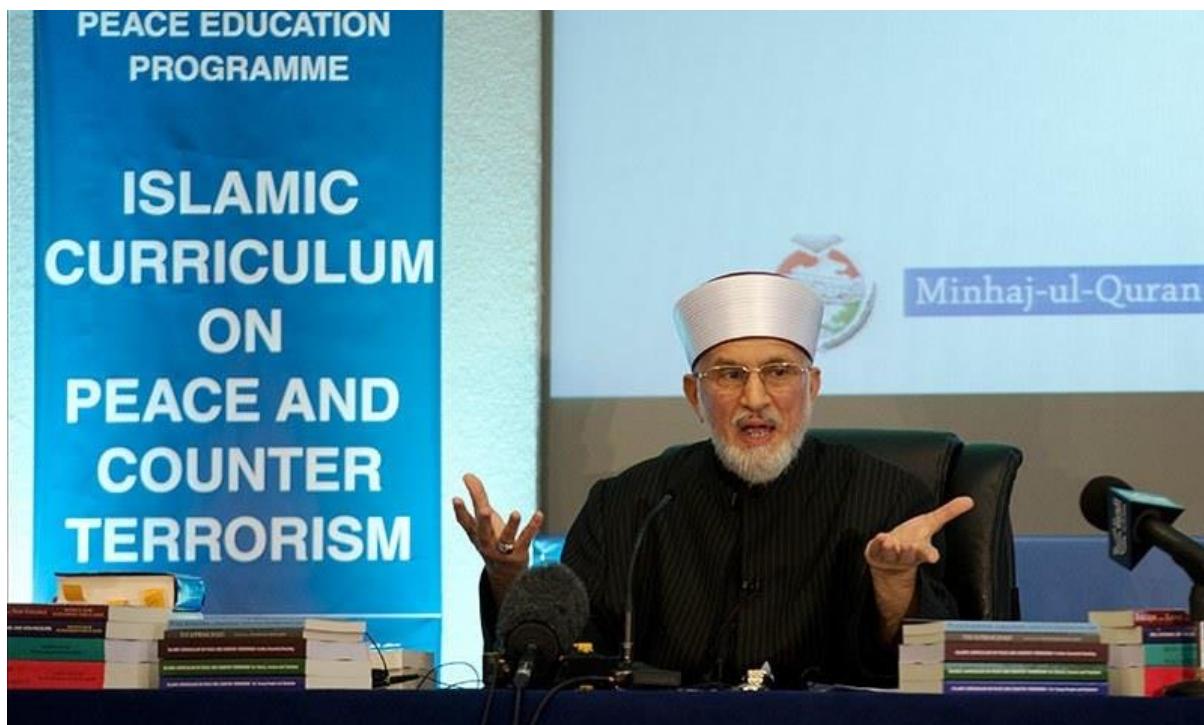

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

DAWN

Tahirul Qadri launches anti-IS curriculum in Britain

REUTERS — 24.06.15

LONDON: Prominent cleric and head of Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) Tahirul Qadri launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as the self-styled Islamic State (IS) and stop young people becoming radicalised and heading to Syria.

Qadri said he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions but at schools across Britain.

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by IS or any other terroristic and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Quran and Islam,” he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as IS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an IS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have travelled to Syria and Iraq, many to join IS.

Take a look: English city stunned by family's flight to join Islamic State.

“The children who are going to ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell,” said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

“They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind.”

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of IS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhajul Quran religious and educational organisation, said 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

“This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too,” said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

“The British Muslim community is part of the solution,” she said. “British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS.”

Dr Qadri launches anti-terrorism curriculum in UK

Says groups like IS recruiting youth using distorted version of religion; Warsi says David Cameron's approach on terrorism wrong

Murtaza Ali Shah

Wednesday, June 24, 2015

From Print Edition

LONDON: Pakistan Awami Tehreek (PAT) Chairman Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri has launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (IS), al-Qaeda, so that young Muslims in Europe could be stopped from becoming radicalised and heading to Syria and other conflict zones to join terror groups.

Dr Qadri was joined at the Westminster Hall for the launch event by a large number of representatives of various Islamic organisations, former cabinet minister Sayeeda Warsi, MP Khalid Mahmood and representatives of various think tanks and media.

The 900-page counter-terrorism curriculum includes a “fatwa” on terrorism, which declares terrorists as disbelievers and condemns suicide bombers as destined for hellfire. Dr Qadri said that the anti-IS curriculum has already received endorsements from hundreds of UK-based Imams, mosques and Muslim organisations and called on the UK government to make the syllabus part of the curriculum, so that the young British Muslims could be empowered to fight extremism through Islamic theological arguments.

Dr Qadri said, “It’s absolutely imperative that Imams, clerics and parents take responsibility and teach the counter-arguments as outlined in our curriculum to protect young Muslims from being brainwashed by evil IS propaganda. Those who brainwash youngsters into becoming suicide bombers by presenting to them rewards of martyrdom and paradise should know that Allah Almighty has fixed the punishment of everlasting Hell for those who commit suicide.”

He said the fact that about 700 Britons have travelled to Syria and Iraq, a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq a few days ago in an IS suicide attack and three British Pakistani sisters are believed to have travelled to Syria with their nine children means that the issue of radicalisation of the young people online and on the ground in Britain and elsewhere is a serious matter which can be defeated through the promotion of true teachings of Islam. He said that the recruitment by terror groups such as IS must be stopped through a counter peace campaign.

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by IS or any other terrorist and extremist organisation either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of teaching of the Holy Quran and Islam.

These people are distorting the teachings of Islam to suit their agenda and they must be defeated. He said the young people were leaving behind life of privileged and leisure to join some of the most misguided people just because they didn’t have the true perspective of Islam taught to them. “They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind.”

He added, "The most profound challenge comes not from the IS or other terrorist groups but from the extremist ideology and the terrorist theology, which aims at creating hatred and narrow thinking and exclusion to further their hate agenda. Killing innocent people is condemnable and un-Islamic, Islamic state cannot come into being on the basis of terrorism and killings.

The Holy Prophet (PBUH) protected human rights of all communities and prioritised saving human lives. There should be an unambiguous condemnation of terrorism and extremist ideology."

Dr Qadri said that it was the Khawariji ideology, which was ripping apart the world and the Holy Prophet (PBUH) had predicted that a group will rise one day which will act in the name of Islam but in reality will have nothing to do with Islam.

Dr Qadri said that "de-radicalisation should be taken as a subject and counter-terrorism should be taken as a subject". He said that his curriculum draws on the teachings of the Holy Prophet (PBUH) "based on love and tolerance and coexistence and togetherness" in order to dismantles what he considers the flawed ideology of terror groups.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as IS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Speaking to The News, Dr Qadri said that he will be launching the same curriculum in Pakistan later this month. He said radicalisation and terrorism was one of Pakistan's main issues. He called on the stakeholders to adopt the anti-extremism curriculum to beat the murderous ideology of terrorists.

Sayeeda Warsi, former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, called on the UK govt departments to consider using the curriculum in all schools to thwart designs of extremists. She slated Prime Minister David Cameron for his recent comments in which he said that British Muslims "quietly condone" IS type groups.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone IS. They condemn IS. They gave come out here today to make it clear that they are in the forefront of fighting jihadi extremism."

Warsi said that the British government has made a huge mistake by disengaging with a large number of British Muslim organisations. She said that the government should listen to all organisations and then adopt a common strategy to defeat extremism.

- See more at: <http://www.thenews.com.pk/Todays-News-2-325287-Dr-Qadri-launches-anti-terrorism-curriculum-in-UK#sthash.Y5DfjwaS.dpu>

Tahirul Qadri launches anti-ISIS curriculum in Britain

By Reuters

Published: June 23, 2015

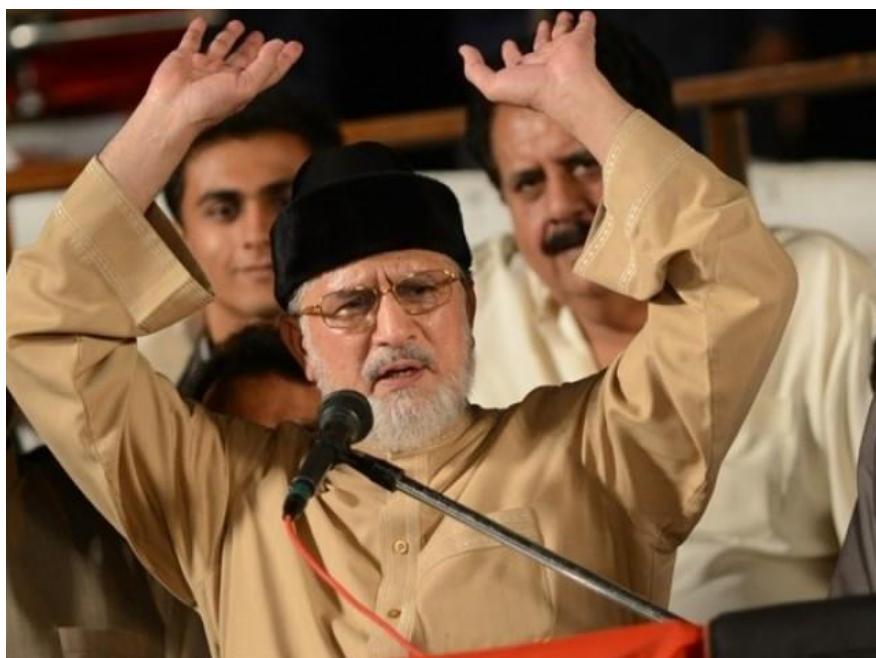

PHOTO: AFP

LONDON: Pakistan Awami Tehreek leader Dr Tahir ul Qadri has launched a “counter-terrorism” curriculum in London on Tuesday, to rebut the message of militant groups such as Islamic State (ISIS) and stop young people becoming radicalized and heading to Syria.

Qadri, who led his followers to lay siege to the Parliament in Islamabad last August, said that he wanted his 900-page curriculum, containing theological and ideological arguments to undermine extremists, to be taught not just at mosques and Islamic institutions, but also at schools across Britain.

“We want to make clear that all activities being carried out by ISIS or any other terroristic and extremist organization either in the name of God or religion or establishing any kind of Islamic state by acts of violence ... are totally in violation of the Quran and Islam,” he told Reuters.

The launch of the curriculum comes after Prime Minister David Cameron called on Muslim communities to do more to stop young people being radicalised by groups such as ISIS, saying some Muslims were quietly condoning extremist views.

Cameron's comments came after a 17-year-old from northern England blew himself up in Iraq in an ISIS suicide attack and three sisters are believed to have traveled to Syria with their nine children. About 700 Britons are estimated to have traveled to Syria and Iraq, many to join ISIS.

"The children who are going to [join] ISIS and fighting over there and leaving the comforts of their own British society, they are going to hell," said Qadri, who five years ago issued a fatwa declaring that terrorists and suicide bombers were unbelievers.

"They are our children. They are our sons and daughters. We have to save the future of mankind."

Experts and politicians argue the slick, online propaganda of ISIS is seducing and radicalising young people in their own bedrooms.

Asked how his academic work could counter this, Qadri, head of the global Minhajul Quran religious and educational organisation, said that 50 young Britons and 50 others in the rest of Europe were being trained to take his narrative online.

"This will be a two-way war, not only through books in the study circles, mosque and schools, but on social media too," said Qadri who plans to take his curriculum to Pakistan, India, across Europe and to the United States.

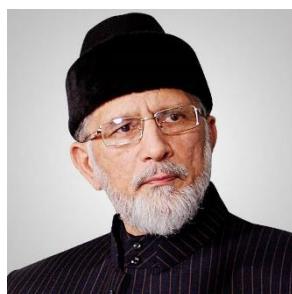

Sayeeda Warsi, a former minister under Cameron and the first Muslim to serve in a British cabinet, told an audience of imams, police, politicians and academics that the government should consider using the curriculum in all schools.

"The British Muslim community is part of the solution," she said. "British Muslim communities do not quietly condone ISIS. They condemn ISIS."

The Nation

Muslims in Britain should take counter-extremism lessons: Tahir ul Qadri

June 23, 2015, 4:27 pm/ 6 Comments

London: Every Muslim in Britain should be made to take counter-extremism lessons at school to prevent radicalisation, a Pakistani politician and senior Islamic scholar has said. Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri said that lessons on “peace”, “counter-terrorism” and “deradicalisation” should be made part of the national curriculum in state schools. He said the subjects should be made compulsory for all Muslim students in the country and optional for non-Muslim children.

It comes as more than 700 Britons have travelled to the Middle East to fight alongside Isil, with around half believed to have returned to the UK.

David Cameron recently criticised Muslim communities who “quietly condone” extremism and defended British authorities who have been blamed by the families of some who have fled east.

Dr Qadri, a Pakistani politician and Sufi Islamic scholar, told BBC Radio Four’s Today programme that Britain should tackle the problem of radicalisation early through the state education system.

He said that while the Muslim community should bear responsibility for tackling the problem “first of all” the government can also act through schools.

“It should be on the curriculum. Peace should be taken as peace studies as a subject. Deradicalisation should be taken as a subject. Counter-terrorism should be taken as a subject,” Dr Qadri said.

“The problem is that we have not been addressing this issue on the theological front and on the ideological front. We have been taking it just as a political, economic and social issue.”

He later added: “We should try to influence the generations – whether second or third or fourth – to always be peaceful and always condemn the act of extremism, act of terrorism wherever it is.

“It should be put on the curriculum, it should be made compulsory for Muslim generations, Muslim students, and it should be made optional for non-Muslim students.”

“But they should be taught the actual real teachings of the Koran … based on love and tolerance and coexistence and togetherness.”

Such a move could prove controversial, with some likely to warn forcing Muslim children to take anti-extremism lessons away from other children could further alienate them.

However the proposals reflect a growing unease about the scale of the problem of radicalisation in Britain and elsewhere with the emergence and establishment of Isil.

Mr Cameron used a major speech in Bratislava, Slovakia, last week to call on more to be done by Muslim communities themselves to stop radicalisation.

“We’ve always had angry young men and women buying into supposedly revolutionary causes. This one is evil, is it contradictory, it is futile but it is particularly potent today,” the Prime Minister said.

“I think part of the reason it’s so potent is that it has been given this credence.

“So if you’re a troubled boy who is angry at the world or a girl looking for an identity, for something to believe in, and there’s something that is quietly condoned online or perhaps even in parts of your local community then it’s less of a leap to go from a British teenager to an Isil fighter or an Isil wife than it would be for someone who hasn’t been exposed to these things.”

A Department of Education spokesperson said: “All schools must actively promote the fundamental British values of democracy, the rule of law, individual liberty, and mutual respect and tolerance for those of different faiths and beliefs.

“Ofsted inspect schools to ensure they comply with this requirement, where schools do not we take swift action, which may involve changing the school leadership or closing the school.

“In addition from 1 July all schools will have a statutory duty to prevent pupils from being drawn into terrorism - this will include safeguarding against radicalisation and checking the speakers they bring in to school.”

Courtesy The Telegraph

Countering the ISIS Terror From an Islamic Theological Perspective

Jun 21, 2015 Dr. Zahid Iqbal

Last weekend, 50 young British Muslims converged to the leafy surroundings of Kidderminster to be trained for counter-extremism work. Their purpose was to learn how to weed out emergent religious extremism from its ideological and theological roots, and therefore to prevent young people from being brainwashed into leaving their homes to join barbaric terrorist groups abroad.

I, along with the other organisers, have watched with some sense of bewilderment and a deep sense of sadness as seemingly academically bright boys and girls and young adults elope to the Middle East as potential jihadi brides or would-be jihadi Johns. There is no doubt in my mind that there is a process of brainwashing involved, as effective as that carried out by any weird or dangerous cult.

And this brainwashing occurs through a combination of exploiting grievances regarding Muslims in difficulty around the world and the promotion of a number of ideological and theological themes. And to top it off, there is a sinister glamorisation of violence and swaggering displays of male machismo in social media broadcasts. All of these together create a potent mix to attract young Muslims, some perhaps looking for purpose or significance in otherwise unfulfilling and anonymous lives.

As for the response from government and most Muslim organisations, I'm afraid it's been woefully inadequate. On the one hand the new government is hell-bent on eroding our civil liberties even more under the pretext of safeguarding security. Millions of pounds of taxpayers' money have already been spent, some on dubious projects, with questionable results. On the other hand, many Muslims wish to deflect blame almost entirely on western foreign policy in Muslim lands, whether military ventures or support of despotic regimes. Yet Muslim imams and scholars must not brush the issue under the carpet or wash their hands of responsibility. Of course, government agencies, law enforcement, schools and other institutes all must play a part, but we Muslims must be central to the process of preventing radicalisation. Much has recently been said in the media on the recognition of radicalisation, but it is an unfortunate fact that many Muslims, whether imams or parents, let alone non-Muslims, cannot recognise the radicalisation process, or present any cogent or evidence based arguments against it. Radicalisation is happening under their very noses and yet there is nothing they can do about it. Neither is it the case, as many non-Muslims may believe, that growing a beard, donning a hijab, avoidance of alcohol or other sudden expressions of religiosity are necessarily indicators of radicalisation. Radicalisation in young Muslims is less to do with outward expressions, than with specific ideas, backed up by ultimately what are flawed and superficial theological justifications.

So, what did the participants of this three-day camp learn, and what do they hope to achieve? They studied a preview of the Curriculum for Peace and Counter Terrorism, the work of the renowned scholar Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, and due for an official launch later this month. This detailed and comprehensive syllabus points to material from authentic and undeniable scriptural and scholarly sources, with counterarguments to the ideas employed by ISIS and other groups. These include the legitimacy of setting up an ‘Islamic state’, the legality of armed rebellion against the Muslim state and collective order, the true concept of jihad, clarification of certain verses of the Qur'an exhort killing, such as “wherever you find them, kill them”, and the beliefs and ideology of the Kharijites. The latter label, ‘Kharijites’, could well form one of the most potent countermeasures against ISIS recruitment, as the official launch in London of the Curriculum will demonstrate later this month.

These 50 young people (half of whom were female) will be travelling the country to speak at school assemblies, youth centres, mosques and other educational institutes. They will be working in social media to counter the rhetoric and misleading propaganda of extremists, and carrying out outreach work. We plan to roll this camp out to other parts of the country, and eventually form a large cadre of young people equipped with the knowledge and skills to tackle this growing problem. Of course, terrorism and extremism has many causes, and one cannot pretend that this is the magic bullet to destroy it once and for all. But for the first time in the UK and Europe, a new front has been opened, an ideological struggle against ISIS and other such groups, a jihad even, spearheaded by young Muslims committed to working in their communities to play their part in helping to destroy this evil scourge.

MEDIA COVERAGE

OTHER LANGUAGES

Saarbrücker Zeitung

Partner von SOL.DE

Mutiges Engagement

Nur ihre Glaubensbrüder können die IS-Mörder wirklich stoppen

Von Iris Neu, 24.06.2015 00:00

Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri heißt der pakistanische Gelehrte, der gestern in London ein umfangreiches Werk gegen islamischen Terrorismus vorgestellt hat. Das erste seiner Art, das eine theologische Auseinandersetzung mit dem islamischen Extremismus führt, wie es heißt. Das Engagement des Geistlichen mag anerkennenswert sein – vielleicht auch mutig. Dass aber dieses „Curriculum gegen den Terror“ überhaupt solches Aufsehen erregt, offenbart zweierlei: zum einen den Mangel an Selbstbehauptung moderater Muslime in ihrer eigenen religiösen Welt – in der sie sich doch, wie stets betont wird, in der Überzahl befinden.

Zum anderen sagt es viel darüber aus, wie auch moderate Imame das Thema Radikalismus im Islam behandeln: bestenfalls dezent – vermutlich aber auch gar nicht. Ist Angst vor extremistischer Gewalt das Motiv? Ist es Toleranz oder gar Akzeptanz?

Machen sich aber nicht gerade die Imame, die jenen religiösen Fanatismus schweigend hinnehmen, mitschuldig an der brutalen Ermordung nicht nur von Christen oder Juden, sondern auch von Abertausenden ihrer eigenen Glaubensbrüder? Es sei falsch, sagte kürzlich auch der britische Premier David Cameron in einer Rede vor Muslimen, radikales Gedankengut und extremistische Ideologien stillschweigend zu billigen, weil dadurch die Grundlage gelegt werde, dass junge Leute ihre schwelenden Vorurteile in mörderische Absichten umwandeln. Völlig richtig, denn das Schweigen der muslimischen Mehrheit dient der brutalen Machtentfaltung von Islamischem Staat, Al Qaida und Co. als Vehikel.

Vor etwa einem halben Jahr wehrte sich der Vorsitzende des Zentralrats der Muslime in Deutschland, Aiman Mazyek, in einer Fernsehsendung gegen die Forderung vieler Nichtmuslime, er solle sich vom Islamismus und dem Islamischen Staat distanzieren. Distanzieren, so Mazyek, könne er sich nur von etwas, „das in meiner Nähe war“. Soll heißen: Von einem Gedankengut, das ich nicht teile, kann ich mich auch nicht distanzieren. Ein einleuchtender Einwand – vordergründig. Der zugleich impliziert, dass der Kampf gegen den islamischen Terror eine gesamtgesellschaftliche Aufgabe sei und keine primär muslimische. Diese Einstellung jedoch ist falsch, weil sie auf den Erfolg nichtreligiöser Überzeugungsarbeit zielt. Diese aber wird bei den Fanatikern höchstwahrscheinlich nicht fruchten.

Tatsächlich ist der Kampf gegen die mörderischen islamistischen Horden nur aus der Glaubensgemeinschaft selbst heraus zu gewinnen. Curriculum-Autor Qadri will den „Dschihad“ gegen den Islamischen Staat. Damit spricht er zielgerichtet dieMuslime an. Und appelliert zwischen den Zeilen an eine religiös aufklärende Einheit aller moderaten Imame. Deren gemeinsame theologische Stimme könnte der Schlüssel dazu sein, den blutigen Terror in die Knie zu zwingen.

Mit islamischen Argumenten gegen den Terrorismus

Fünf Jahre sammelte der pakistanische Islamgelehrte Tahir-ul-Qadri Argumente gegen den Terrorismus. Sein Werk ist wichtig, aber sein Wirken nicht ganz unumstritten.

VON TAHIR CHAUDHRY

23. Juni 2015 19:15

Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri | © Kieran Doherty / Reuters.com

Das Papier ist 900 Seiten lang und soll Muslimen Argumente gegen Dschihadisten liefern. Der sunnitisch-pakistanische Islamgelehrte Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri hat das Curriculum gegen den Terrorismus am Vormittag in London vorgestellt. Die "Brutalität, Kriminalität und Gewalt" der Terrororganisation "Islamischer Staat" (IS) sei unvereinbar mit dem Koran, sagte er und fordert eine "gezielte Zusammen- und Aufklärungsarbeit von muslimischen Gemeinden sowie Regierung, Universitäten, Schulen und Eltern". Nur so könne verhindert werden, dass sich immer wieder Europäer von der Ideologie faszinieren und vom IS rekrutieren ließen.

Qadris Organisation Minhaj-ul-Quran hatte das Papier, über dessen Inhalt noch nichts bekannt ist, als "das wohl umfassendste Werk gegen den Terrorismus" gepriesen. Die Gruppe ist auch in Deutschland aktiv und setzt sich nach eigenen Angaben unter anderem gegen Extremismus und für interreligiösen Dialog ein.

Qadri hat Dutzende Fatwas und Bücher zum Thema Entradikalisierung und Terrorismusbekämpfung verfasst. Nun hat er alle Argumente auf Basis islamischer Quellen zusammengeführt. Als Curriculum sollen sie unter jungen Muslimen verbreitet werden, um sie "vor der Gehirnwäsche der teuflischen IS-Propaganda zu schützen", wie er sagt.

Nach Schätzungen des britischen Außenministeriums sollen sich mittlerweile mehr als 700 Briten der Terrorgruppe "Islamischer Staat" (IS) angeschlossen haben.

Angesichts dieser Zahl, meist sind es Jugendliche, müsse man endlich schulpädagogisch aktiv werden, sagt Qadri. In einem Interview mit dem britischen Radiosender LBC hatte er vor Kurzem gefordert, das Papier solle als verpflichtender Teil der religiösen Ausbildung in allen Moscheen eingeführt werden.

Fünf Jahre hat er für das Papier gebraucht. Die Resonanz unter Muslimen sei durchgehend positiv, sagt er. Das Curriculum werde von Hunderten in Großbritannien ansässigen Imamen, Moscheen und muslimischen Organisationen unterstützt – die größte islamische Vereinigung, der Muslim Council of Britain, dem 500 Islamverbände angehören, äußert sich allerdings mit keinem Wort dazu.

Qadri will als Islamgelehrter berühmt werden

Seine Organisation bezeichnet Qadri als "Mainstream-Gelehrten" und als eine "weithin anerkannte Autorität des Islam". Der seit 2006 in Kanada lebende Muslim war allerdings bis vor wenigen Jahren noch eine relativ unbekannte Figur in der islamischen Welt. Immer wieder hatte er versucht, Ruhm zu erlangen. 2010, zum Beispiel, als er eine Fatwa gegen Selbstmordattentäter erteilte, die er als Ungläubige und Feinde des Islam bezeichnet. Erst als er Anfang 2013 zum Anführer einer Revolutionsbewegung wurde, die den politischen Islam in Pakistan mittels Druck der Straße durchsetzen wollte, gelang es ihm, seinen Bekanntheitsgrad auch in der Islamischen Welt zu steigern.

Inspiriert durch den "Arabischen Frühling" organisierte er eine Sitzblockade im pakistanischen Regierungsviertel, begleitet von Rücktrittsforderungen an den Premier Nawaz Sharif. Hunderttausende strömten zu seinen Kundgebungen. Im Oktober 2014 musste er jedoch seinen Protest wegen fehlender Perspektiven und der Hartnäckigkeit der Regierung erfolglos abbrechen und sich aus der pakistanischen Politik zurückziehen.

Nun versucht er, auf einem anderen Weg Aufmerksamkeit zu bekommen.

MINHAJ-UL QURAN INTERNATIONAL

Start eines globalen Anti-ISIS-Curriculums gegen Terrorismus

22.06.2015 – 11:02 MEDIEN

London (ots/PRNewswire) - David Cameron hat in seiner Rede über Radikalisierung zweifellos einige zutreffende Punkte zum Kampf gegen ISIS hervorgehoben, aber Tatsache ist, dass die Mehrheit der Muslime ISIS und Terrorismus eindeutig verurteilen.

(Photo: <http://photos.prnewswire.com/prnh/20150616/749171> )

Morgen früh, am 23. Juni, wird der renommierte muslimische Mainstream-Gelehrte Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri im Rahmen einer Pressekonferenz in Westminster, London, ein globales Anti-ISIS-Curriculum "gegen Terrorismus" ins Leben rufen, das ISIS und die terroristische Ideologie verurteilt.

Das 900-seitige Curriculum gegen Terrorismus enthält eine Fatwa gegen Terrorismus, die Terroristen zu Ungläubigen erklärt und Suizidattentätern mit dem Höllenfeuer droht. Es umfasst weitere 10 Anti-Terror-Bücher in englischer Sprache und ist wohl das aktuell umfassendste Curriculum gegen Terrorismus. Das Anti-ISIS-Curriculum wurde bereits von Hunderten in Grossbritannien ansässigen Imamen, Moscheen und muslimischen Organisationen befürwortet.

Zum ersten Mal hat ein Mainstream-Gelehrter wie Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri die Initiative ergriffen und ISIS sowie andere Terrorgruppen direkt mit genau den Texten konfrontiert, die die Terrorgruppen missbrauchen, um junge britische Muslime zu radikalisieren und zu rekrutieren.

Dr. Qadri wird sagen, "es ist absolut notwendig, dass Imame, Geistliche und Eltern die Verantwortung übernehmen und die in unserem Curriculum beschriebenen Gegenargumente vermitteln, um junge Muslime vor der Gehirnwäsche der teuflischen ISIS-Propaganda zu schützen."

Er wird sagen, "diejenigen, die Jugendliche dazu bringen, Suizidattentäter zu werden, indem sie ihnen die Belohnungen des Märtyrertums und das Paradies versprechen, sollten wissen, dass Allah, der Allmächtige, Selbstmörder mit ewiger Verdammnis in der Hölle bestraft."

Dr. Qadri wird erläutern, wie "Konservatismus zu Extremismus und Extremismus zu Terrorismus führt".

Auch Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI), eine britische Gemeinschaftsorganisation gegen Extremismus, wird eine Kampagne starten, die vor weiteren ISIS-Rekrutierungen in Grossbritannien abschrecken und gefährdete Jugendliche von Reisen in den Irak oder Syrien zum Beitritt zu der militanten Gruppe abhalten soll.

Der Sprecher von Minhaj-ul-Quran in Grossbritannien, Shahid Mursaleen, sagte dazu: "Das erste detaillierte Curriculum gegen Terrorismus nimmt die ISIS und die terroristische Ideologie auseinander und fordert sie unumwunden theologisch heraus. ISIS hat absolut keinen Anlass, den Dschihad zu erklären oder junge Muslime in Grossbritannien für den Dschihad zu rekrutieren."

"Bisher haben wir 50 junge britische Muslime nach diesem Curriculum geschult, die bereits online und in Schulen gegen die ISIS-Ideologie vorgehen."

- Minhaj-ul-Quran ist eine internationale Organisation mit Hunderttausenden von Anhängern weltweit. - Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri ist eine weithin anerkannte Autorität zum Islam. - Er hat Hunderte von Büchern über islamisches Recht und islamische Rechtssysteme geschrieben. Außerdem war er Professor für islamische Rechtswissenschaft. - Dr. Qadri ist bis heute der erste muslimische Mainstream-Gelehrte, der den Terrorismus unmissverständlich verurteilt.

Kontakt für Medienanfragen und Interviews mit Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri: Shahid Mursaleen Sprecher von Minhaj-ul-Quran International spokesman@minhajuk.org +44(0)7791-299-871

Photo: <http://photos.prnewswire.com/prnh/20150616/749171>

<http://wijblijvenhier.nl/30849/terrorismebestrijding-en-deradicalisatie-zou-deel-van-het-curriculum-moeten-zijn-dr-tahir-ul-qadri/>

Terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie ‘zou deel van het curriculum moeten zijn’: Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri

Herinner je je het inmiddels wereldberoemde Oxford Union Debate van de journalist Mehdi Hasan nog, waarin hij duidelijk maakte voorstander te zijn van de stelling dat de Islam een vredige religie is, en zijn tegenstanders in het debat daar weinig tegenin konden brengen? Misschien herinner je je ook dat hij allerlei beroemde en authentieke geleerden citeerde om zijn stelling te onderbouwen? Een daarvan was Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri, een Islamitische geleerde, die in 2010 het boek Fatwa Against Terrorism and Suicide Bombings schreef naar aanleiding van de terreuraanslagen van de Taliban en al-Qaeda. Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri, en zijn internationale NGO Minhaj-ul-Quran, organiseerde vele deradicalisatie bijeenkomsten en evenementen voor moslimjongeren in Engeland en West-Europa tot een aantal jaar geleden. En nu, met de toegenomen spanningen in de samenleving tussen moslims en niet-moslims, voelt deze geleerde zich wederom geroepen om zijn stem te laten horen. Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri is een pionier op zijn gebied, want vandaag lanceert hij het eerste Islamitisch curriculum op het gebied van vrede en terrorismebestrijding.

Het curriculum is opgesteld voor geleerden, overheden, ambtenaren en studenten die studeren op academisch niveau, en is bedoeld voor moslims én niet-moslims. Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri laat weten in een interview dat...

“...het probleem is dat wij het probleem [van terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie] niet aangepakt hebben vanuit het theologische en ideologische front. We hebben het slechts benaderd als een politieke, economische en sociologische kwestie”.

“We zouden moeten proberen (...) om altijd vredig te zijn en de daad van terrorisme en extremisme altijd af te keuren. Waar dan ook, het hoort een plek te krijgen in het curriculum. Het zou verplicht moeten zijn voor de moslim leerlingen en optioneel worden gemaakt voor niet-moslim leerlingen. Maar ze moeten de échte leer van Quran en Sunnah worden geleerd die bestaat uit liefde, tolerantie en saamhorigheid.”

Het is te makkelijk om alleen te wijzen naar de media, of zogenaamde ‘Westerse’ complottheorieën die de moslims in een slecht daglicht stellen. Het is moeilijker om onszelf onder ogen te zien en te zeggen dat we “intern” óók een probleem hebben. Er zijn mensen die ten prooi vallen voor het extremistische gedachtegoed; er zijn mensen die denken dat Islam een gewelddadige levensstijl aanmoedigt; er zijn mensen die actief deelnemen of passief toestemmen door te zwijgen. Terrorismus en Islam hebben niets met elkaar te maken, behalve dat het eerstgenoemde het probleem is, en het laatstgenoemde de oplossing. Het probleem ligt ergens anders, en de oplossing bij de moslimgemeenschap.

Als je het mij vraagt lijkt dit een belangrijke stap te zijn in de richting van het herstellen van de schade die de moslimgemeenschap en islam is aangedaan door extremisten, sektariërs en terroristische organisaties zoals ISIS. Wat vaak vergeten wordt is dat het woord ‘terrorist’ niet synoniem is aan ‘moslim’: de extreem rechtse gedachtegoed is spiritueel en fysiek net zo dodelijk voor de mensheid. Als een niet-moslim terrorist op klaarlichte dag negen mensen kan doodschieten in een kerk, denk ik dat het hoog tijd is om terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie lessen serieus te overwegen in ons curriculum, voor moslims én niet-moslims.

http://www.lemonde.fr/europe/article/2010/03/02/un-erudit-musulman-publie-une-fatwa-contre-le-terrorisme\_1313557\_3214.html

Le Monde.fr

Un érudit musulman publie une fatwa contre le terrorisme

Le Monde.fr avec AFP | 02.03.2010 à 18h23 • Mis à jour le 02.03.2010 à 22h07

Abonnez-vous
à partir de 1 € Réagir Classer

Partager facebook twitter google + linkedin pinterest

Un éminent érudit musulman d'origine pakistanaise, Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, a condamné mardi les terroristes, considérés comme des ennemis de l'islam, dans une fatwa (avis juridique donné par un spécialiste de loi islamique) rendue publique à Londres.

Il souligne que les actes de terrorisme ne pouvaient avoir aucune justification au nom de l'islam, condamnant notamment les attentats d'Al-Qaida, dans cette fatwa de quelque six cents pages présentée au cours d'une conférence de presse à Londres, en présence notamment de députés et de représentants d'associations caritatives.

Les kamikazes "ne peuvent pas prétendre que leur suicide sont des actes commis par des martyrs qui deviendront des héros de l'oumma [la communauté musulmane], non, ils deviendront des héros du feu de l'enfer", a déclaré le Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri. "Il n'y a aucune place pour le martyre, et leurs actes ne seront jamais, jamais, considérés comme le djihad ['guerre sainte']", a-t-il ajouté.

Cette fatwa "peut être considérée comme l'argumentaire théologique le plus complet contre le terrorisme islamiste à ce jour", selon la fondation londonienne Quilliam, qui combat l'extrémisme musulman. Si d'autres responsables musulmans avaient par le passé déjà condamné le terrorisme, M. Qadri, qui s'est exprimé en anglais et en arabe, a souligné que cette fatwa écartait complètement tout type d'excuse pour justifier la violence. Il a souligné que l'islam était une religion de paix, appelant d'autres responsables religieux à rejoindre sa position.

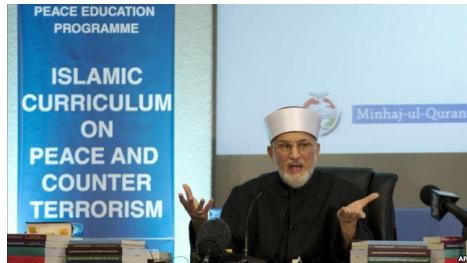

Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri est à la tête du mouvement Minhaj-ul-Quran, une organisation de tradition soufie, qui combat l'extrémisme religieux dans des centres situés dans des dizaines de pays.

En savoir plus sur http://www.lemonde.fr/europe/article/2010/03/02/un-erudit-musulman-publie-une-fatwa-contre-le-terrorisme\_1313557\_3214.html#FuS9q5uP9QEUfh85.99

<http://www.voaindonesia.com/content/akademisi-muslim-siapkan-kurikulum-anti-teror-bagi-sekolah-sekolah-di-inggris/2833997.html>

Cendekiawan Muslim Siapkan Kurikulum 'Anti-Teror' bagi Sekolah-sekolah di Inggris

Dr Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri dari Pakistan, pendiri Minhaj-ul-Quran International, pada peluncuran 'Kurikulum Islam bagi Perdamaian dan Kontra Terorisme,' di London, Selasa (23/6).

PM Inggris: Kaum Muslim Harus Berbuat Lebih Banyak untuk Lawan Ideologi ISIS

Pernyataan dari Perdana Menteri David Cameron ini membuat banyak kalangan menganggap ia menjadikan komunitas Muslim di negaranya sebagai kambing hitam.

Associated Press

23.06.2015 LONDON—

Seorang cendekiawan Muslim mengumumkan rancangan kurikulum baru yang mengutuk ideologi ekstrem dan gerakan kelompok Negara Islam.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri mengatakan Selasa, pentingnya untuk mengajarkan orang segala umur dan golongan kepercayaan bahwa terorisme merupakan penyimpangan dari prinsip-prinsip ajaran agama Islam.

Kurikulum sepanjang 900 halaman ini dirancang untuk menghentikan penyebaran ajaran Islam militan yang meradikalisisasi ribuan warga Eropa termasuk ratusan di antaranya dari Inggris yang bergabung dengan militer ISIS di Suriah dan Irak, dan tinggal di kekhalifahan yang dideklarasikan kelompok tersebut.

Ul-Qadri tidak memiliki kedudukan resmi dalam pemerintahan Inggris dan belum jelas apakah kurikulum susunannya akan digunakan oleh sekolah-sekolah negeri di negara ini.

<http://wijblijvenhier.nl/30849/terrorismebestrijding-en-deradicalisatie-zou-deel-van-het-curriculum-moeten-zijn-dr-tahir-ul-qadri/>

Terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie ‘zou deel van het curriculum moeten zijn’: Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri

24.06.15

Herinner je je het inmiddels wereldberoemde Oxford Union Debate van de journalist Mehdi Hasan nog, waarin hij duidelijk maakte voorstander te zijn van de stelling dat de Islam een vredige religie is, en zijn tegenstanders in het debat daar weinig tegenin konden brengen? Misschien herinner je je ook dat hij allerlei beroemde en authentieke geleerden citeerde om zijn stelling te onderbouwen? Een daarvan was Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri, een Islamitische geleerde, die in 2010 het boek Fatwa Against Terrorism and Suicide Bombings schreef naar aanleiding van de terreuraanslagen van de Taliban en al-Qaeda. Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri, en zijn internationale NGO Minhaj-ul-Quran, organiseerde vele deradicalisatie bijeenkomsten en evenementen voor moslimjongeren in Engeland en West-Europa tot een aantal jaar geleden. En nu, met de toegenomen spanningen in de samenleving tussen moslims en niet-moslims, voelt deze geleerde zich wederom geroepen om zijn stem te laten horen. Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri is een pionier op zijn gebied, want vandaag lanceert hij het eerste Islamitisch curriculum op het gebied van vrede en terrorismebestrijding.

Het curriculum is opgesteld voor geleerden, overheden, ambtenaren en studenten die studeren op academisch niveau, en is bedoeld voor moslims én niet-moslims. Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri laat weten in een interview dat...

“...het probleem is dat wij het probleem [van terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie] niet aangepakt hebben vanuit het theologische en ideologische front. We hebben het slechts benaderd als een politieke, economische en sociologische kwestie”.

“We zouden moeten proberen (...) om altijd vredig te zijn en de daad van terrorisme en extremisme altijd af te keuren. Waar dan ook, het hoort een plek te krijgen in het curriculum. Het zou verplicht moeten zijn voor de moslim leerlingen en optioneel worden gemaakt voor niet-moslim leerlingen. Maar ze moeten de échte leer van Quran en Sunnah worden geleerd die bestaat uit liefde, tolerantie en saamhorigheid.”

Het is te makkelijk om alleen te wijzen naar de media, of zogenaamde ‘Westerse’ complottheorieën die de moslims in een slecht daglicht stellen. Het is moeilijker om onszelf onder ogen te zien en te zeggen dat we “intern” óók een probleem hebben. Er zijn mensen die ten prooi vallen voor het extremistische gedachtegoed; er zijn mensen die denken dat Islam een gewelddadige levensstijl aanmoedigt; er zijn mensen die actief deelnemen of passief toestemmen door te zwijgen. Terrorismus en Islam hebben niets met elkaar te maken, behalve dat het eerstgenoemde het probleem is, en het laatstgenoemde de oplossing. Het probleem ligt ergens anders, en de oplossing bij de moslimgemeenschap.

Als je het mij vraagt lijkt dit een belangrijke stap te zijn in de richting van het herstellen van de schade die de moslimgemeenschap en islam is aangedaan door extremisten, sektariërs en terroristische organisaties zoals ISIS. Wat vaak vergeten wordt is dat het woord ‘terrorist’ niet synoniem is aan ‘moslim’: de extreem rechtse gedachtegoed is spiritueel en fysiek net zo dodelijk voor de mensheid. Als een niet-moslim terrorist op klaarlichte dag negen mensen kan doodschieten in een kerk, denk ik dat het hoog tijd is om terrorismebestrijding en deradicalisatie lessen serieus te overwegen in ons curriculum, voor moslims én niet-moslims.

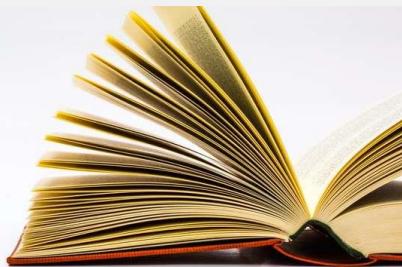

<http://www.cnnindonesia.com/internasional/20150624100419-134-62024/ulama-pakistan-luncurkan-kurikulum-anti-isis-di-inggris/>

Ulama Pakistan Luncurkan Kurikulum Anti-ISIS di Inggris

Reuters/Ranny Utami, CNN Indonesia

Rabu, 24/06/2015 10:42 WIB

Seorang ulama terkemuka di Inggris meluncurkan kurikulum yang berisi ajaran kontraterorisme untuk membantu menghentikan para pemuda bergabung bersama ISIS.
(Hermann/Pixabay)

London, CNN Indonesia -- Seorang ulama asal Pakistan mengeluarkan kurikulum kontraterorisme di London pada Selasa (23/6). Kurikulum ini dibuat untuk menangkis dakwah dari kelompok militan seperti ISIS dan menghentikan para pemuda bersikap radikal hingga pergi ke Suriah.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri, seorang politisi, cendekiawan sekaligus orator, mengatakan bahwa ia ingin kurikulum yang ia buat diterapkan tidak hanya di masjid dan institusi Islam, tetapi juga di sekolah-sekolah di London.

Kurikulum yang dimuat ke dalam 900 halaman ini berisikan pendapat teologis dan ideologis untuk melemahkan ekstremis.

"Kami ingin menekankan bahwa semua aktifitas yang dilakukan oleh ISIS atau kelompok teroris atau organisasi ekstremis lain, meski membawa nama Tuhan atau agama atau bahkan membangun semacam Negara Islam (ISIS) dengan cara kekerasan, itu semua benar-benar melanggar ajaran Quran dan Islam," ujar Qadri kepada Reuters.

Video Baru ISIS, Sandera Ditenggelamkan Hingga Tewas

Boneka Osama Bin Laden Dilelang Minimal Rp66 Juta

Ejek ISIS, Bintang Serial TV Satire Saudi Diancam

ISIS Ikat dan Gantung Dua Remaja yang Batal Puasa

Kurikulum ini dikeluarkan tidak lama setelah Perdana Menteri Inggris, David Cameron, menyerukan kepada warga dan komunitas Muslim untuk menghentikan para pemuda bersikap radikal seperti ISIS. Selain itu, ia juga mengatakan bahwa beberapa Muslim diam-diam membenarkan pandangan ekstremis.

Pernyataan Cameron ini menindaklanjuti peristiwa bom bunuh diri pria 17 tahun asal Inggris utara di Irak dalam sebuah serangan ISIS dan tiga perempuan yang pergi ke Suriah dengan membawa sembilan anak-anak mereka.

Sejauh ini setidaknya 700 pemuda Inggris diyakini telah pergi ke Suriah dan Irak untuk bergabung bersama ISIS.

"Anak-anak yang bergabung bersama ISIS, berperang di sana dan meninggalkan kenyamanan mereka di tanah Inggris, mereka akan pergi ke neraka," ujar Qadri.

"Mereka adalah anak-anak kita. Kita harus menyelamatkan masa depan kemanusiaan," ujar pria yang sempat mengeluarkan fatwa bahwa teroris dan pengebom bunuh diri adalah orang tak beragama.

Para ahli dan politisi berpendapat bahwa propaganda online menjadi salah satu faktor para pemuda di Inggris bersikap radikal di negara mereka sendiri.

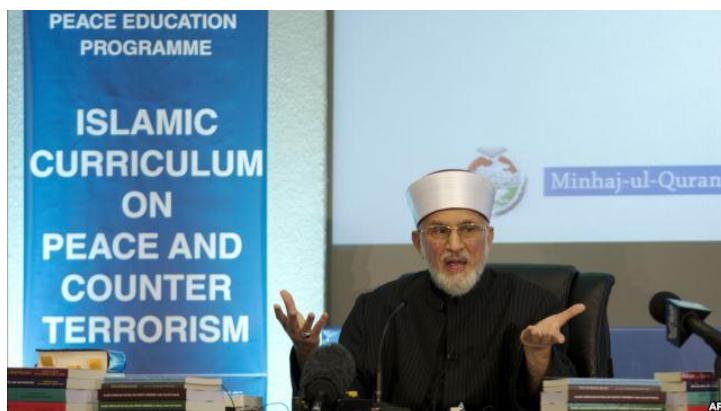

Demi mengatasi masalah ini, Qadri yang juga merupakan kepala organisasi pendidikan dan keagamaan global Minhajul Quran, mengatakan 50 pemuda Inggris dan 50 pemuda lainnya di Eropa telah dilatih untuk menyebarkan kurikulum ini secara online.

"Ini akan menjadi perang dua arah bukan hanya melalui buku dalam pendidikan di sekolah atau masjid, tetapi juga di media sosial," ujar Qadri. Ia berencana untuk menyebarkan kurikulumnya ke Pakistan, India hingga Eropa dan Amerika Serikat.

Sayeeda Warsi yang merupakan mantan pejabat urusan Agama dan Komunitas di bawah pemerintahan Cameron dan Muslim pertama yang memiliki jabatan di pemerintahan Inggris, mengatakan kepada para imam, polisi, politisi dan akademisi bahwa pemerintah harus mempertimbangkan penggunaan kurikulum ini di semua sekolah.

"Warga Muslim di Inggris adalah bagian dari solusinya dan mereka tidak secara diam-diam membenarkan ISIS, melainkan mengutuknya," ujar Warsi.

Cendekiawan Muslim Siapkan Kurikulum 'Anti-Teror' bagi Sekolah-sekolah di Inggris

Dr Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri dari Pakistan, pendiri Minhaj-ul-Quran International, pada peluncuran 'Kurikulum Islam bagi Perdamaian dan Kontra Terorisme,' di London, Selasa (23/6).

PM Inggris: Kaum Muslim Harus Berbuat Lebih Banyak untuk Lawan Ideologi ISIS

Pernyataan dari Perdana Menteri David Cameron ini membuat banyak kalangan menganggap ia menjadikan komunitas Muslim di negaranya sebagai kambing hitam.

Associated Press

23.06.2015 LONDON—

Seorang cendekiawan Muslim mengumumkan rancangan kurikulum baru yang mengutuk ideologi ekstrem dan gerakan kelompok Negara Islam.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri mengatakan Selasa, pentingnya untuk mengajarkan orang segala umur dan golongan kepercayaan bahwa terorisme merupakan penyimpangan dari prinsip-prinsip ajaran agama Islam.

Kurikulum sepanjang 900 halaman ini dirancang untuk menghentikan penyebaran ajaran Islam militan yang meradikalisisasi ribuan warga Eropa termasuk ratusan di antaranya dari Inggris yang bergabung dengan militan ISIS di Suriah dan Irak, dan tinggal di kekhalifahan yang dideklarasikan kelompok tersebut.

Ul-Qadri tidak memiliki kedudukan resmi dalam pemerintahan Inggris dan belum jelas apakah kurikulum susunannya akan digunakan oleh sekolah-sekolah negeri di negara ini.

Müslümanlar radikalleşmeden rahatsız!

Pakistanlı İslam âlimi El Kadri'nin Londra'da yayınladığı cihatçılığı eleştiren yazısı geniş yankı buldu. İngiltere'de yaşayan Müslümanlar cemaat mensuplarının giderek radikalleşmesinden kendilerini de sorumlu tutuyor.

24.06.2015 - 13:29

İki koca da şaşkınlık, gözyaşlarını zor tutuyorlar. Aktar İkbal ve Muhammed Şueyb bir basın toplantısında kardeş olan eşleri Sugra ve Hediye'ye dönmeleri için yalvarıyorlar. Eşleri, üçüncü kardeş Zühere Davud'u da yanlarına alarak Mayıs ayında Suriye'ye geçmişler. Umre için yola çıkan üç kardeş 11 Mayıs'ta İngiltere'nin Bradford kentine dönecekti. Ancak 9 Mayıs'ta irtibat kesildi ve iki erkek hazırlanan ortalarında katıldıkları televizyon programında eşlerine seslendiler.

Üç kardeşin Türkiye'deki aktarma sırasında kafileden ayrılarak Suriye'ye geçip terör örgütü IŞİD'e katıldıkları tahmin ediliyor. Üç kardeş yalnız seyahat etmiyordu. Yaşları üç ile on beş arasında değişen çocukların da yanlarına almışlardı. IŞİD safında savaşan erkek kardeşlerinin isteği üzerine Suriye'ye gitmiş olabilecekleri söyleniyor. Şimdi nerede oldukları bilinmiyor.

IŞİD fetvası

Davud kardeşler gibi cihatçıların yanında savaşmak için Suriye'ye giden İngiliz vatandaşlarının sayısı 700'ü buluyor. Bunların yarısı sonradan İngiltere'ye dönmüştü.

Diğer Avrupa ülkelerinde olduğu gibi İngiltere'de de genç Müslümanların savaşmak için Suriye'ye gitmelerinde ayrimcılık ve gelecek umidinin olmamasının rol oynadığı söyleniyor. Aile geleneklerine yabancı bir ortamda kimlik arayışı ve farklı kültürler arasındaki sıkışmışlığın gençleri radikalleşmeye ve cihatçılığa ittiği varsayılıyor.

Son ay ve haftalarda din bilginleri ve imamlar da bu tartışmalara daha fazla önem vermeye başladı. 2014 yılında IŞİD hakkında çıkarılan fetvada, örgütün tanrıtanımadır radikal bir örgüt olduğu, örgütte katılmanın haram sayıldığı ve IŞİD'in zehirli ideolojisiyle aktif bir şekilde mücadele edilmesinin vacip olduğu vurgulanmaktadır.

'İntihar komandosunun yeri cehennemdir'

İslam bilgini Tahir el Kadri Londra'da genç Müslümanları radikalleşmeden caydırma amacıyla bir bildirge yayınladı. İslamçı radikalizm ile mücadele amacıyla kurulan derneğin başkanı olan El Kadri 2010larındaki fetvasında intihar saldırganlarını Allah'a inanmamakla suçlamış ve yerlerinin cehennem olduğunu duyurmuştur.

El Kadri son yayınının üç sayfasını IŞİD'e ayırmış. Beyannamede İslam hukukunun IŞİD ve benzeri örgütlenmeleri meşru saymadığını, bu tip örgütlerin İslam devletlerine ve kamu düzenine karşı ayaklandıklarını ve IŞİD'in insanlığın düşmanı olduğunu dile getiriyor.

'Okullarda radikalizm dersi okutulsun'

Tahir el Kadri katıldığı son televizyon programında İngiltere'nin okul ve üniversitelerinde barışçı İslam'ı tanıtma ve teröre karşı olduklarını anlatmak için hazırlık yaptıklarını, radikalleşmenin okullarda ele alınması ve 'barış ve barış araştırmaları' dersinin müfredata dâhil edilmesi için girişimde bulunduklarını anlattı.

İngiliz uyruklu din bilgini terörle mücadele ve radikalleşmeden uzaklaştırma gibi konuların da derslerde konu edilmesi gerektiğine işaret ettikten sonra radikalleşmenin tek düzeyde ele alınmasını doğru bulmadıklarını belirtti ve ekledi: "Problem konunun ilahiyatçılık ve ideolojik düzeyde tartışılmamasından kaynaklanıyor. Radikalleşme şimdide kadar sadece siyasi, ekonomik ve sosyolojik yanlarıyla tartışıldı."

İngiltere Müslümanlarının özeleştirileri

İngiltere'deki İslam cemaatleri gençlerin radikalleşmesindeki sorumluluklarını sorgulamaya başladı. Daily Telegraph gazetesinin 17 Haziran tarihli nüshasında bir imamın, "Müslümanlar artık, içlerinden radikalleşenlerin çıktıığı grupları hedef göstermekten ve sorumluluğu İngiliz makamlarına yüklemek vazgeçmeli", şeklindeki sözlerini yayınladı. 'Muslim Forum' adlı derneğin başkanı Manzoor Moghal da Daily Mail gazetesinde yayınlanan makalesinde Müslümanları eleştirerek, radikalleşmenin Müslümanların problemi olduğunu savundu. Moghal, "oğlunun IŞİD'e katıldığını öğrenmek Müslüman ebeveyn için tabii ki son derece üzücüdür. Ama bu ailelerin suçu hep başkalarına atmaları beni endişelendiriyor", dedi.

dw turkish

Lancement du programme mondial de lutte contre le terrorisme anti-EIIL

Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri is a leading Muslim scholar, author of Fatwa on Terrorism & Suicide Bombings and Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism and founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International. He is also Chairman of ...

LONDRES, June 22, 2015 /PRNewswire/ --

Le discours de David Cameron sur la radicalisation a, sans l'ombre d'un doute, mis en évidence des faits avérés concernant le scénario de l'état islamique en Irak et au Levant (EIIL), mais dans les faits, la majorité des Musulmans condamnent sans équivoque l'EIIL et le terrorisme.

(Photo: <http://photos.prnewswire.com/prnh/20150616/749171>)

Demain matin, le 23 juin, lors d'une conférence de presse qui se tiendra à Westminster, Londres, le Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, un érudit traditionnel reconnu, lancera un « programme de lutte contre le terrorisme » anti-EIIL, condamnant l'EIIL et l'idéologie terroriste.

Ce programme de lutte contre le terrorisme de 900 pages inclut une fatwa sur le terrorisme, qui déclare que les terroristes sont des mécréants et condamne ceux qui commettent des attentats-suicides aux flammes de l'enfer. Complété de 10 ouvrages de lutte contre le terrorisme rédigés en anglais, il constitue, à juste titre, le programme le plus complet contre le terrorisme à ce jour. Le programme anti-EIIL a déjà été approuvé par des centaines d'Imams, de mosquées et d'organisations musulmanes situées au Royaume-Uni.

Pour la première fois, un érudit traditionnel, le Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, a pris l'initiative de se confronter à l'EIIL et à d'autres groupes terroristes en s'appuyant sur les textes que ces groupes terroristes utilisent à mauvais escient pour radicaliser et recruter de jeunes Musulmans britanniques.

Le Dr Qadri s'exprimera en ces propos : « Il est absolument impératif que les Imams, les ecclésiastiques et les parents prennent leurs responsabilités et transmettent les contre-arguments figurant dans notre programme afin de protéger les jeunes Musulmans contre le lavage de cerveau mis en œuvre par la propagande diabolique de l'EIIL. »

Il poursuivra ainsi : « Ceux qui font du lavage de cerveau auprès de jeunes gens afin de les inciter à commettre des attentats-suicides, en leur faisant miroiter la récompense du martyr et du paradis, doivent savoir qu'Allah le Tout Puissant condamne ceux qui se suicident à l'enfer éternel. »

Le Dr Qadri expliquera comment « le conservatisme conduit à l'extrémisme et l'extrémisme au terrorisme ».

Minhaj-ul-Quran International (MQI), une organisation communautaire basée au Royaume-Uni qui œuvre contre l'extrémisme, lancera également une campagne visant à dissuader le recrutement de l'EIIL en Grande Bretagne et à dissuader les adolescents vulnérables de voyager en Irak ou en Syrie pour rejoindre le groupe militant.

Le porte-parole de Minhaj-ul-Quran UK, Shahid Mursaleen, a déclaré : « Le premier programme détaillé de lutte contre le terrorisme démantèle l'EIIL et l'idéologie terroriste et leur fait obstacle sur le plan théologique. L'EIIL n'a absolument aucune légitimité pour déclarer le jihad ou recruter, au Royaume-Uni, de jeunes Musulmans pour qu'ils fassent le jihad. »

« Jusque-là, nous avons, dans le cadre de ce nouveau programme, formé 50 jeunes Britanniques de confession musulmane, qui s'opposent déjà à l'idéologie de l'EIIL en ligne et dans les écoles. »

- Minhaj-ul-Quran est une organisation internationale populaire, qui compte des milliers de sympathisants dans le monde.
- Le Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri est une autorité hautement reconnue de l'Islam.
- Le Dr Qadri est l'auteur de centaines d'ouvrages sur la loi islamique et les systèmes juridiques islamiques et ancien professeur de jurisprudence islamique.
- À ce jour, le Dr Qadri est le premier érudit traditionnel de confession musulmane à condamner sans équivoque le terrorisme.

Contact presse pour les enquêtes et les interviews avec le Dr Tahir-ul-Qadri :

Shahid Mursaleen

Porte-parole de Minhaj-ul-Quran International

spokesman@minhajuk.org

+44(0)7791-299-871

SOURCE Minhaj-ul Quran International

Start eines globalen Anti-ISIS-Curriculums gegen Terrorismus

Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri is a leading Muslim scholar, author of Fatwa on Terrorism & Suicide Bombings and Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism and founder of Minhaj-ul-Quran International. He is also Chairman of ...

LONDON, June 22, 2015 /PRNewswire/ --

David Cameron hat in seiner Rede über Radikalisierung zweifellos einige zutreffende Punkte zum Kampf gegen ISIS hervorgehoben, aber Tatsache ist, dass die Mehrheit der Muslime ISIS und Terrorismus eindeutig verurteilen.

(Photo: <http://photos.prnewswire.com/prnh/20150616/749171> )

Morgen früh, am 23. Juni, wird der renommierte muslimische Mainstream-Gelehrte Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri im Rahmen einer Pressekonferenz in Westminster, London, ein globales Anti-ISIS-Curriculum "gegen Terrorismus" ins Leben rufen, das ISIS und die terroristische Ideologie verurteilt.

Das 900-seitige Curriculum gegen Terrorismus enthält eine Fatwa gegen Terrorismus, die Terroristen zu Ungläubigen erklärt und Suizidattentätern mit dem Höllenfeuer droht. Es umfasst weitere 10 Anti-Terror-Bücher in englischer Sprache und ist wohl das aktuell umfassendste Curriculum gegen Terrorismus. Das Anti-ISIS-Curriculum wurde bereits von Hunderten in Großbritannien ansässigen Imamen, Moscheen und muslimischen Organisationen befürwortet.

Zum ersten Mal hat ein Mainstream-Gelehrter wie Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri die Initiative ergriffen und ISIS sowie andere Terrorgruppen direkt mit genau den Texten konfrontiert, die die Terrorgruppen missbrauchen, um junge britische Muslime zu radikalisieren und zu rekrutieren. Dr. Qadri wird sagen, "es ist absolut notwendig, dass Imame, Geistliche und Eltern die Verantwortung übernehmen und die in unserem Curriculum beschriebenen Gegenargumente vermitteln, um junge Muslime vor der Gehirnwäsche der teuflischen ISIS-Propaganda zu schützen."

Er wird sagen, "diejenigen, die Jugendliche dazu bringen, Suizidattentäter zu werden, indem sie ihnen die Belohnungen des Märtyrertums und das Paradies versprechen, sollten wissen, dass Allah, der Allmächtige, Selbstmörder mit ewiger Verdammnis in der Hölle bestraft."

Dr. Qadri wird erläutern, wie "Konservatismus zu Extremismus und Extremismus zu Terrorismus führt".

Auch Minhaj-ul Quran International (MQI), eine britische Gemeinschaftsorganisation gegen Extremismus, wird eine Kampagne starten, die vor weiteren ISIS-Rekrutierungen in Großbritannien abschrecken und gefährdete Jugendliche von Reisen in den Irak oder Syrien zum Beitritt zu der militanten Gruppe abhalten soll.

Der Sprecher von Minhaj-ul-Quran in Großbritannien, Shahid Mursaleen, sagte dazu: "Das erste detaillierte Curriculum gegen Terrorismus nimmt die ISIS und die terroristische Ideologie auseinander und fordert sie unumwunden theologisch heraus. ISIS hat absolut keinen Anlass, den Dschihad zu erklären oder junge Muslime in Großbritannien für den Dschihad zu rekrutieren."

"Bisher haben wir 50 junge britische Muslime nach diesem Curriculum geschult, die bereits online und in Schulen gegen die ISIS-Ideologie vorgehen."

- Minhaj-ul-Quran ist eine internationale Organisation mit Hunderttausenden von Anhängern weltweit.
- Dr. Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri ist eine weithin anerkannte Autorität zum Islam.
- Er hat Hunderte von Büchern über islamisches Recht und islamische Rechtssysteme geschrieben. Außerdem war er Professor für islamische Rechtswissenschaft.
- Dr. Qadri ist bis heute der erste muslimische Mainstream-Gelehrte, der den Terrorismus unmissverständlich verurteilt.

Kontakt für Medienanfragen und Interviews mit Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri:

Shahid Mursaleen

Sprecher von Minhaj-ul-Quran International

spokesman@minhajuk.org

+44(0)7791-299-871

SOURCE Minhaj-ul Quran International

국제

국제일반

英 이슬람 학자, 반테러 교과과정 공개

기사등록 일시 [2015-06-24 15:54:08]

인쇄하기  이메일  크게  작게

Members of the audience listen as Pakistan cleric Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri, the founder of the Minhaj-ul-Quran International organization, delivers a keynote speech at the launch of the Islamic Curriculum on Peace and Counter Terrorism in London, Tuesday, June 23, 2015. The curriculum is described by the organizers of the event as a syllabus that provides material to form the basis of educational programs and campaigns against religious extremism and radicalization, and for the promotion of peace. (AP Photo/Matt Dunham) 2015-06-24

【런던=AP/뉴시스】 박준호 기자 = 영국의 한 이슬람 학자가 극단주의 무장단체 이슬람국가(IS)와 극단주의 이념을 비판하는 반테러(anti-terror) 학교 교육 과정 초안을 공개했다.

무하마드 타히르 울 카드리는 23일(현지시간) "모든 남녀노소에게 테러리즘은 이슬람 원리를 위반한 것이라는 믿음을 가르치는 게 필수적"이라고 말했다.

900페이지에 달하는 커리큘럼은 무장 이슬람 단체의 확산을 막도록 설계되어 있다.

울 카드리는 커리큘럼이 시리아로 가길 원하거나 그들 스스로 칼리페이트(칼리프 통치 이슬람국가)라고 부르는 지역에서 살길 원하는 유럽인들에게 제공되어야 한다고 말했다.

다만 울 카드리는 커리큘럼 운영과 관련해 영국 정부와 공식적으로 논의하지 않았으며

실제로 그의 교육 과정이 공립학교에서 쓰여질지는 불확실하다고 AP통신은 전했다.

pjh@newsis.com

http://m.voaindonesia.com/a/2833997.html?fb\_action\_ids=10152838906942653&fb\_action\_types=og.recommends&fb\_source=other\_multiline&action\_object\_map=%5B1085279628149566%5D&action\_type\_map=%5B%22og.recommends%22%5D&action\_ref\_map=%5B%5D

Cendekiawan Muslim Siapkan Kurikulum 'Anti-Teror' bagi Sekolah-sekolah di Inggris

2 hari lalu

- Associated Press

Dr Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri dari Pakistan, pendiri Minhaj-ul-Quran International, pada peluncuran 'Kurikulum Islam bagi Perdamaian dan Kontra Terorisme,' di London, Selasa (23/6).

Teruskan

Lihat komentar

Seorang cendekiawan Muslim mengumumkan rancangan kurikulum baru yang mengutuk ideologi ekstrem dan gerakan kelompok Negara Islam.

Muhammad Tahir ul-Qadri mengatakan Selasa, pentingnya untuk mengajarkan orang segala umur dan golongan kepercayaan bahwa terorisme merupakan penyimpangan dari prinsip-prinsip ajaran agama Islam.

Kurikulum sepanjang 900 halaman ini dirancang untuk menghentikan penyebaran ajaran Islam militan yang meradikalisasi ribuan warga Eropa termasuk ratusan di antaranya dari Inggris yang bergabung dengan militan ISIS di Suriah dan Irak, dan tinggal di kekhalifahan yang dideklarasikan kelompok tersebut.

Ul-Qadri tidak memiliki kedudukan resmi dalam pemerintahan Inggris dan belum jelas apakah kurikulum susunannya akan digunakan oleh sekolah-sekolah negeri di negara ini.

رجل دين باكستاني يضع منهاجاً لمكافحة الإرهاب والفكر المتشدد في بريطانيا

Tue Jun 23, 2015 5:44pm GMT

اطبع هذا الموضع | صفحة واحدة

[+] نص [+]

111

زنگنه

من ملکیل هولدن

لندن (رويترز) - وضع رجل دين باكتستاني مسلم منهاجا "المكافحة الإرهاب" في لندن يوم الثلاثاء يهدف لتقويد نهج الجماعات المتشددة مثل تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية ومنع السجناء من الجروح نحو التطرف والتوجه إلى سوريا.

وقال محمد طاهر القادرى وهو سياسى ومنكر وخطيب حماسى انه
بريد لمنهاجه الواقع في 900 صفحة الذى يشمل طرحا دينيا
وعقائلا أن يفرض فكر ومنهاج المنشددين وأن يدرس ليس فقط في
المساجد والمعاهد الإسلامية بل أيضا في جميع أنحاء
بريطانيا

وأضاف لرويترز "نريد أن نوضح أن جميع الممارسات التي يقوم بها تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية في العراق والشام أو أي منظمة إرهابية ومنظرفة إما باسم الله أو الدين أو بعرض تأسيس أي نوع من الدولة الإسلامية من طريق العنف .. تحالف الاستسلام والقرآن تماماً".

وأعلن القادري عن مناهجه في أعقاب دعوة رئيس الوزراء البريطاني ديفيد كاميرون المجتمع المسلم لبذل المزيد من الجهود لوقف جنوح الشباب نحو التطرف على يد جماعات مثل تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية في العراق والشام متبركاً أن بعض المسلمين يتذمرون بصمت عن الآراء المتطرفة.

و جاءت تصريحات كاميرون بعد أن فجر بريطاني (17 عاما) من تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية نفسه في العراق في حين يعتقد أن كانت تهدّد سفن الملاحة في سوريا مع أربعة من أشخاصه.

ويقدر عدد البريطانيين الذين سافروا إلى سوريا والعراق بنحو 700 بريطاني انضم أكثرهم إلى تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية

وَفِلَادِي "إِنَّ الْأُولَادَ الَّذِينَ يَتَوَجَّهُونَ إِلَى تَطْبِيقِ الدُّولَةِ الْإِسْلَامِيَّةِ وَيَقْاتِلُونَ هُنَّاكَ وَيَتَرَكُونَ نَعِيمَ مَجَمِعِهِمْ
"البطاطس ستدفعون إلى الحرج

وكان القاري قد أصدر قبل خمس سنوات قتوبي بيان الإزهارين والانتحاريين كندا

<http://aawsat.com/home/article/391021/%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%82%D8%A7%D8%AF%D8%B1%D9%8A-%C2%AB%D8%AF%D8%A7%D8%B9%D8%B4-%D8%B4%D8%B1-%D9%82%D8%AF%D9%8A%D9%85%C2%BB-%D8%A8%D8%A7%D8%B3%D9%85-%D8%AC%D8%AF%D9%8A%D8%AF>

الشرق الأوسط
جريدة العرب الدولية
ASHARQ AL-AWSAT

القادي: «داعش شر قديم» باسم جديد

العالم الإسلامي الباكستاني يطالب بتطبيق مناهج دراسية في «مناهضة الإرهاب» و«التصدي للتطرف» في المدارس والجامعات البريطانية

الشيخ محمد طاهر القادي، جانب من الحضور في المؤتمر الصحفي للشيخ طاهر القادي أمس (تصوير: جيمس حنا)

- A + A 9 Share 0 g+1 Tweet 1 Pinterest Like 18

لندن: محمد الشافعي

أعلن العالم الإسلامي الباكستاني الشيخ محمد طاهر القادي، الذي أصدر فتاوى ضد الإرهاب والعمليات الانتحارية، أنه

أعلن العالم الإسلامي الباكستاني الشيخ محمد طاهر القادي، الذي أصدر فتاوى ضد الإرهاب والعمليات الانتحارية، أنه لا يخشى الانتقام من الأعداء، وأنه ليس خائفاً على حياته.

وقال القادي، مؤسس منظمة «منهاج القرآن» العالمية التي لها اتباع بعشرات الآلاف حول العالم، في اتصال هاتفي أجرته معه «الشرق الأوسط» قبل مؤتمر صحافي عقده في العاصمة لندن صباح أمس: «لست خائفاً من أي شخص على سطح الأرض.. إنني أعمل من أجل جسر الفجوة بين العالم الإسلامي والغرب، وإزالة الكراهية وكل أسباب سوء الفهم. أريد أن يفهم العالم أن إسلامنا منهجه وسطي معتدل يدعو إلى السلام والمحبة». وقال إنه ينبغي على كل مسلم في بريطانيا تلقي دروس في مناهضة التطرف في المدارس والجامعات من أجل التصدي لمحاولات جذب البشر نحو التطرف.

وأوضح القادي أنه ينبغي لمناهج الدولة الحكومية أن تشمل دروساً في «السلام»، و«مناهضة الإرهاب»، و«التصدي للتطرف». وأوضح أن تلك المواد الدراسية لا بد أن تكون إجبارية بالنسبة إلى كل الطلبة المسلمين في البلاد، واختيارية بالنسبة إلى الأطفال غير المسلمين. وأضاف قائلاً: «ينبغي أن تضم المناهج هذا الأمر. وينبغي أن تتم مناقشة السلام في إطار مادة دراسات السلام. وكذلك ينبغي أن تكون مناهضة التطرف مادة دراسية هي الأخرى، وكذلك مناهضة الإرهاب».

وأفاد بأن فتاواه التي أصدرها قبل خمس سنوات من بريطانيا في كتاب من 600 صفحة بالعربية والإنجليزية والأردية كانت ضد الانتحاريين، لكنه اليوم يصدر من لندن كتاباً ضد فكر الدواعش أعداء الإنسانية، يطالب فيه بتطبيق منهاج دراسية إجبارية بالنسبة للطلبة المسلمين تتصدى للتطرف والفكر المتشدد. وقال إن الأدلة في كتابه الجديد ضد «داعش» مستمدة من الكتاب والسنة النبوية المطهرة. وأوضح أنه دعا مفكرين وساسة ونواباً وضباط شرطة بريطانيين لمؤتمره الصدافي الذي يطالب فيه بالتصدي لفكرة التطرف والانتحاريين في المدارس والجامعات. وأوضح أنه تلقى استجابة من كثير من الأئمة في بريطانيا وباكستان بخصوص دعوه الجديدة للتصدي لفكرة الانتحاريين في المدارس والجامعات.

ويأتي هذا الطرح في وقت سافر فيه نحو 700 بريطاني إلى الشرق الأوسط من أجل المقاتلة في صفوف تنظيم داعش، ويعتقد أن نصفهم قد عاد إلى المملكة المتحدة. وانتقد ديفد كامبرون، رئيس الوزراء البريطاني، مؤخراً

ويأتي هذا المطرح في وقت سافر فيه نحو 700 بريطاني إلى الشرق الأوسط من أجل المقاتلة في صفوف تنظيم داعش، ويعتقد أن نصفهم قد عاد إلى المملكة المتحدة. وانتقد ديفيد كاميرون، رئيس الوزراء البريطاني، مؤخراً الجالية المسلمة التي «تقر التطرف بهدوء»، ودافع عن السلطات البريطانية التي حملتها أسر بعض من هربوا مسؤولية ما حدث. وقال إنه في الوقت الذي يتعين فيه على الجالية المسلمة تحمل مسؤولية معالجة هذه المشكلة «قبل أي شيء»، يمكن للحكومة أن تتخذ إجراءات من خلال المدارس.

ووصف المرجع الإسلامي قيادات وعناصر «داعش» الذين يشيرون الرعب في كل مكان بقطع الرؤوس وقتل الأبرياء من النساء والأطفال بأنهم «خوارج العصر الحديث.. كاب أهل النار»، مؤكداً أنهم «لن يدخلوا الجنة أو يশموا ريحها». وأضاف القادرى الباكستاني المولود: «من هذا المنطلق حياتي بين يدي الموتى عزوجل، وأنا لا أخشى أحداً، فهذا الأمر يعتمد على إرادة الله، فإذا كنت سأعيش فإني سأعيش، وبخلاف ذلك فأنا لست خائفاً».

وقال مؤسس منظمة « منهاج القرآن » العالمية عبر الهاتف من لندن قبل ساعات من مؤتمر الصحافي الذي حظي بإقبال من ممثلي الصحافة البريطانية: «تنطق فتاوى على (داعش)، لأنهم يقطعون رقاب الناس، فهم يقتلون المسلمين وغير المسلمين، ولا يدافعون عن الإسلام، وما يفعلونه ليس دفاعاً عن النفس، فهم يقتلون المسلمين ويزعزعون استقرار العالم الإسلامي ويقومون بتغذية الفرقة في العالم العربي.. وبالتأكيد فهم يسيئون للإسلام ويحطمون الشعوب المسلمة». وأكد الشيخ القادرى أن مقاتلي «داعش»: «لن يدخلوا الجنة ولن يشموا ريحها، فهم يقطعون الرقاب ويهدمون المساجد، ويثيرون الرعب، وكل تلك التصرفات السيئة لا تؤدي إلى الجنة، وكل ما يفعلونه يعتبر ذنوباً لا تؤدي إلا إلى جهنم».

وقال القادرى إن الانتحاريين «لا يمكنهم الادعاء بأن انتحارهم عمل من أعمال الشهادة ليصبحوا من أبطال الأمة، هذا غير صحيح، لأنهم سيصبحون من أبطال النار في الجحيم». وأضاف أن «أفعالهم في هذه الحالة لا يمكن بأي شكل أن تصنف في إطار الجهاد». وأضاف أن الإسلام «ليس فقط بريئاً من التفجيرات الانتحارية والهجمات التي تستهدف المدنيين، لكنه أيضاً يخرج المتورطين فيها من الملة القوية، أي أنه يعتبرهم كفاراً». ووصف «داعش» بأنه «شر قديم باسم جديد». واستشهد المرجع الإسلامي بحديث شريف يقول: «يُخْرَجُ قَوْمٌ مِّنْ أَقْبَلِي يَقْرَأُونَ الْقُرْآنَ، لَيَسْتَ قِرَاءَتُهُمْ إِلَى قِرَاءَتِهِمْ، وَلَا ضَلَالُهُمْ إِلَى ضَلَالِهِمْ شَيْئاً، وَلَا صِيَامُهُمْ إِلَى صِيَامِهِمْ شَيْئاً، يَقْرَأُونَ الْقُرْآنَ يَخْسِبُونَ أَنَّهُ لَهُمْ وَهُوَ عَلَيْهِمْ، لَا تَجَاوِزُ ضَلَالُهُمْ تَزَانِيَهُمْ، يَقْرَأُونَ الْقُرْآنَ كَفَّا يَقْرَأُ الشَّهْمُ مِنَ الزُّوْرَةِ».

وقال القادري إنه يعتقد أن السواد الأعظم من شباب المسلمين في بريطانيا لم ينجروا إلى التشدد، وإنه يعتقد أنهم سيفكرون مرة أخرى بعد قراءة فتواه. وأوضح: «لا يكون المزع إرهابيا في يوم ولية، وإنما هي رحلة طويلة من الاعتدال إلى التطرف والتشدد، من منهج الإسلام الوسطي إلى الخروج من الملة الحنيفة. هناك كثيرون على هذا الطريق إلا أنهم لم يتحولوا إلى انتحاريين بعد». وأصدر العالم الإسلامي فتواه التي تتضمن تفنيدا للدعاوى الدينية للانتحاريين بعد تزايد أعداد التفجيرات الإرهابية والانتحارية في سوريا والعراق وأفغانستان ولبنان وباكستان. وأعرب عن أمله أن تجذب آراؤه نظر السياسيين وأجهزة الأمن في الدول الغربية.

وقال المرجع الإسلامي: «إن العالم الغربي يرى أن هناك تطرفًا عنيفًا وتطرفًا غير عنيف، وإننا يجب أن نقاوم التطرف العنيف ولا نقاوم غير العنيف، إلا أنني أعارض هذه الرؤية. فأنا أرى التطرف كتطرف وليس هناك مجال للتفرقة بين العنيف وغير العنيف، فكل تطرف لا بد في النهاية أن يصير إلى إرهابا. فالterrorism يعارض تدريس الإسلام وتدریس تعاليم النبي محمد (صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم) المبنية على الاعتدال، حيث قال رسول الله (صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم) إن الإسلام دين الوسطية. فقد دعانا رسول الله (صلی اللہ علیہ وسلم) دوما إلى الاعتدال».

من جهتها، قالت مؤسسة «كويليام» البريطانية التي تحارب التطرف الإسلامي إن فتاوى القادري «يمكن أن تعتبر الحجة الفقهية الأكمل ضد التشدد والتطرف حتى يومنا هذا».

وشدد القادري، في اتصاله الهاتفي بالعربية والإنجليزية مع «الشرق الأوسط»، على أن هذه الفتوى ترفض بشكل قاطع أي عذر لتبرير العنف. وتتابع الشيخ القادري: «الإرهاب هو الإرهاب والعنف هو العنف ولا مكان لهما في تعاليم الإسلام، ولا يوجد لهما أي تبرير أو عذر أو حجة». وشدد على أن الإسلام هو دين سلام وتسامح، داعيا المسلمين إلى الاقتداء بهذا الموقف. وقال إن عناصر «داعش» ينشرون الكراهية رغم أن الإسلام لم يدع إلى قتل غير المسلمين ما دام بربنا ولم يقاتل حتى وإن انتسب لدار الحرب. وأكد الشيخ القادري أنه لا توجد دار حرب في بلاد المسلمين. وفي رأيه أن هناك خمس ديار: «دار السلام»، «دار الحرب»، رغم أن هناك من يسميها «دار الكفر»، ثم «دار الصلح»، و«دار العهد»، و«دار الأمن». وأوضح القادري: «لا يمكنك إعلان أي بلاد كدار للحرب ما دامت تعاليم الإسلام تمارس فيها، وما دامت تقام فيها صلاة الجمعة وصلاة العيددين والمصلاحة المعتادة، ويسمح فيها بالصيام وبحرية العبادة. فقد يكون البلد غير مسلم إلا أنه سمح لك بحرية العبادة. دولة كهذه تعتبر دار السلام ودار الأمن، بينما دار العهد هي كل شعوب العالم التي تندرج تحت قانون الأمم المتحدة».

وكان الشيخ القادري أصدر من قبل فتوى نشرتها «الشرق الأوسط» في حينها جاءت في 600 صفحة، أدان فيها الإرهاب، واعتبر من يقومون بأعمال إرهابية أعداء للدين الحنيف. وصرح القادري بأن موجة الإرهاب والتطرف تؤدي إلى تدهور وضع الأمن والسلام في العالم بصفة مستمرة، وأنه من المؤسف أن النشاطات الإرهابية التي تقوم بها عناصر ضالة مثل «داعش» و«جبهة النصرة» تُنضاف إلى الإسلام، ولكن في الواقع ليس الأمر كذلك. وأضاف بقوله إن «معظم رجال الدين يقومون بإدانة أعمال إرهابية بشكل مبهم»، موضحاً أن منظمة «منهج القرآن» العالمية لا تدين أعمال الإرهاب فحسب، وإنما ترفض ظاهرة الإرهاب بكل أشكالها على كل المستويات بشكل تام، مشيراً إلى أن الإسلام يدعو إلى الأمن والسلام.

وفي فتواه، قال القادري: «لا مكان للإرهاب والعنف في تعاليم الإسلام، وإن من يقومون بأعمال الإرهاب سواء من (داعش) أو (جبهة النصرة) لن يدخلوا الجنة أبداً، يشموا ريحها، هؤلاء الذين ينتظرون من الإسلام ما يتمناهم وما يبرر أفعالهم الشيعية ويزعمون أنهم على حق ينطبق عليهم الحديث الشريف: (يخرج الناس من قبل المشرق، يقرأون القرآن لا يجاوز تراقيهم، يمرقون من الدين كما يمرق السهم من الزمية)». وأضاف أنه لا يعتقد أن رسالته ستصل إلى العدد القليل من المتشددين من «داعش» و«جبهة النصرة» الذين تعرضوا بالفعل لعملية غسيل دماغ، لكنه أوضح أن مئات الآلاف من الشباب السائرين على الطريق أو من المحتمل أن يتطرفوا سوف يستمعون لفتواه.

وقال القادري إن المهاجمين الانتحاريين يُعتبرون خارجين عن دائرة الإسلام، معرجاً عن أمله في ألا يستخدم الشباب من قبل عناصر إرهابية أو منظمات متطرفة بعد دراستهم فتاواه، مضيفاً بقوله إن «العناصر الإرهابية تقوم بغسيل أدمغة الشباب عبر تفسير عقائد الإسلام بشكل خاطئ، ويجب على الشباب الابتعاد عن نشاطات المتطرفين». وأوضح أنه أصدر أكثر من 500 كتاب في الفقه والشريعة وأحكام الدين من بينها 25 كتاباً باللغة العربية والأردية والإنجليزية خصصها للتصدي للمفسدين في الأرض من الإرهابيين والمتشددين الذين يعيشون في الأرض فساداً وهم الخوارج «شار أمتى يقتلهم خيار أمتى» بموجب الحديث الشريف «إنهم شر الخلق والخلية، يقتلهم خير الخلق والخلية، وأقربيهم عند الله وسيلة». وقال القادري: «إن الانتحاريين لا يمكنهم الادعاء بأن انتحارهم عمل من أعمال الشهادة ليصبحوا من أبطال الأمة، هذا غير صحيح لأنهم سيصبحون من أبطال النار في الجحيم». وأضاف أن «أفعالهم في هذه الحالة لا يمكن بأي شكل أن تصنف في إطار الجهاد». وأوضح القادري عبر الهاتف من مقر منظمة «منهاج القرآن» بلندن أن «الإرهاب لا مجال له في الإسلام، ولا يمكن أن يحظى بمشروعية في أي حالة من الأحوال». وأعرب عنأسفه أن البعض يقومون بشرح أحكام الإسلام التي تدعو إلى الأمان والسلام والمحبة والرفاهية حسب أهوائهم وذلك م. أحـ. تحـقـيقـةـ مـصالـحـهـ الشـخـصـيـةـ.

أوضح طاهر القادي أن «الذين يريدون تطبيق النظام الإسلامي على الآخرين عبر استخدام القوة ينتمون إلى مجموعة الخوارج التي حملت السلاح وقامت بالبغي المسلح ضد الدولة الإسلامية باسم تنفيذ أحكام الله تعالى في عصر سيدنا علي (رضي الله عنه)، مشيرا إلى أن «خوارج العصر الحديث ينتمون إلى سلالة الخوارج الذين بروزا في عصر سيدنا علي (رضي الله عنه) باعتبار أشكالهم وتصوفاتهم، وينطبق عليهم قول الحديث الشريف: (قال رسول الله صلى الله عليه وسلم: يخرج في آخر الزمان قوم أحداث الأسنان سفهاء الأحلام يقولون من خير الناس يقرأون القرآن لا يجاوز تراقيهم يمرقون من الإسلام كما يمرق السهم من الرمية فمن لقيهم فليقتلهم فإن قتلهم أجر عند الله لمن قتلهم)».

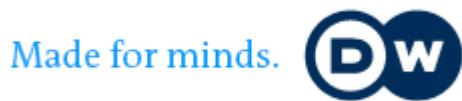

وقال القادي إن الإسلام وضع قوانين الحرب، حيث منح الأطفال والنساء والمسنين حماية تامة خلال الحرب، وإن مراكز تجارية ومدارس ومستشفيات وأماكن العبادة مناطق آمنة حسب تلك القوانين الحربية. وصرح أيضاً بأن «الإسلام لا يسمح بقتل المواطنين الأبرياء بأي سبب من الأسباب، وأنه يجب على الدولة الإسلامية أن تقوم بتطبيق نظام العدل والعقوبات بشكل تام وتقديم مرتكبي الأعمال الإجرامية للعدالة، ولا يجوز لأحد انتهاك قوانين الدولة».

ووجه القادي النقد إلى معارضي النظام الديمقراطي، وفي الوقت نفسه أوضح أن النبي صلى الله عليه وسلم شرع النظام الديمقراطي والاستشاري. وقام بتذكير الحكومات الإسلامية بأن من مسؤولياتها الوطنية والدينية استئصال جذور ظاهرة الإرهاب وتفكيك شبكات إرهابية، ويجب عليها مواصلة العمليات العسكرية إلى أن يتم استئصال مجموعات إرهابية بشكل تام.

ويترأس الشيخ محمد طاهر القادي حركة « منهاج القرآن » الصوفية التي تحارب التطرف الديني في عشرات المراكز المنتشرة في بريطانيا. والشيخ القادي من مواليد عام 1951، ووالده الشيخ فريد الدين القادي الجيلاني كان من كبار علماء الشريعة في باكستان. وقد تولى خلال حياته العديد من المناصب العلمية، وانتخب عضواً في البرلمان الباكستاني عام 2002، إلا أنه ما لبث أن استقال احتجاجاً على ما اعتبره ممارسات منافية للدستور والديمقراطية.

أخبار ذات صلة

<http://www.dw.com/ar/%D8%B1%D8%AC%D9%84-%D8%AF%D9%8A%D9%86-%D9%8A%D8%B6%D8%B9-%D9%85%D9%86%D9%87%D8%A7%D8%AC%D8%A7-%D9%84%D9%85%D9%83%D8%A7%D9%81%D8%AD%D8%A9-%D8%A7%D9%84%D8%A5%D8%B1%D9%87%D8%A7%D8%A8-%D9%88%D8%A7%D9%84%D8%AA%D8%B7%D8%B1%D9%81-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%81%D9%83%D8%B1%D9%8A/a-18537400>

أخبار

رجل دين يضع منهاجاً لمكافحة الإرهاب والتطرف الفكري

أعلن رجل دين باكستاني مسلم في لندن أنه وضع منهاجاً "لمكافحة الإرهاب والتطرف الفكري" يهدف إلى تقويض نهج الجماعات المتشددة مثل تنظيم "داعش" والحيلولة دون جنوح الشباب نحو التطرف الذي يجعلهم يلتحقون بتنظيمات متطرفة.

وضع رجل دين باكستاني مسلم منهاجا "المكافحة الإرهاب" في لندن اليوم الثلاثاء (23 يونيو/حزيران 2015) يهدف لتقريب نهج الجماعات المنتسبة مثل تنظيم "الدولة الإسلامية" ومنع الشبان من الجنوح نحو التطرف والتوجه إلى سوريا.

وقال محمد طاهر القاري وهو سياسي ومحامي إنه يريد لمنهاجه الواقع في 900 صفحة الذي يتضمن طرحا دينيا وعقائديا أن يقوض فكر ومنهاج المتشددين وأن يدرس ليس فقط في الجامعات والمعاهد الإسلامية بل أيضا في المدارس في جميع أنحاء بريطانيا.

وأضاف لرويترز "تريد أن توضح أن جميع الممارسات التي يقوم بها تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية" في العراق والشام أو أي منظمة إرهابية ومتطرفة إما باسم الله أو الدين أو بغض تأسيس أي نوع من الدولة الإسلامية عن طريق العنف .. تناقض الإسلام والقرآن تماما".

وقال القاري "إن الأولاد الذين يتوجهون إلى تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية" وبفالون هناك ويتركون نعيم مجتمعهم البريطاني سيدهبون إلى الجحيم". وكان القاري قد أصدر قبل خمس سنوات فتوى بأن الإرهابيين والانتحاريين كفار. وقال "إنهم أولادنا، أبناءنا وبناتنا، علينا أن ننقد مستقبل البشرية".

وعن الكيفية التي يمكن لعمله الأكاديمي أن يكافح هذه الظاهرة، قال القاري رئيس مؤسسة منهاج القرآن الدينية والعلمية، إن 50 بريطانيا و50 آخرين من باقي أوروبا يتلقون حاليا تدريبا لنشر تصوص منهاجه عبر وسائل التواصل الاجتماعي.

وقال القاري "ستنتهي هذه الحرب من محورين ولن تشمل فقط الكتب في الحلقات الدراسية والجامعي والمدارس بل أيضا وسائل التواصل الاجتماعي".

وجاء إعلان القاري عن منهاجه في أعقاب دعوة رئيس الوزراء البريطاني ديفيد كاميرون المجتمعات المسلمة لبذل المزيد من الجهود لوقف جنوح الشباب نحو التطرف على يد جماعات مثل تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية في العراق والشام معتبرا أن

وعن الكيفية التي يمكن لعمله الأكاديمي أن يكافح هذه الظاهرة، قال القاري رئيس مؤسسة منهاج القرآن الدينية والعلمية، إن 50 بريطانيا و50 آخرين من باقي أوروبا يتلقون حاليا تدريبا لنشر تصوص منهاجه عبر وسائل التواصل الاجتماعي.

وقال القاري "ستنتهي هذه الحرب من محورين ولن تشمل فقط الكتب في الحلقات الدراسية والجامعي والمدارس بل أيضا وسائل التواصل الاجتماعي".

وجاء إعلان القاري عن منهاجه في أعقاب دعوة رئيس الوزراء البريطاني ديفيد كاميرون المجتمعات المسلمة لبذل المزيد من الجهود لوقف جنوح الشباب نحو التطرف على يد جماعات مثل تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية في العراق والشام معتبرا أن بعض المسلمين يتغاضون بصمت عن الآراء المتطرفة.

وجاء تصريحات كاميرون بعد أن فجر بريطاني (17 عاما) من تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية نفسه في العراق في حين يعتقد أن ثلاث تفجيرات سافرن إلى سوريا مع أبنائه التسعة. ويقدر عدد البريطانيين الذين سافروا إلى سوريا والعراق بنحو 700 بريطاني انضم أكثرهم إلى تنظيم الدولة الإسلامية.

ح.ع.ج/د.(رويترز)

مختارات

غزة - التصعيد بين حماس وأنصار "داعش" يذري بانفجار الأوضاع

مركز "الحياة" للإرشاد - من أجل إنفاذ الفتايات من التطرف

أهل القديح يحملون التحرير الطائفى مسؤولية ضحاياهم

أهل القديح يحملون التحرير الطائفى مسؤولية ضحاياهم

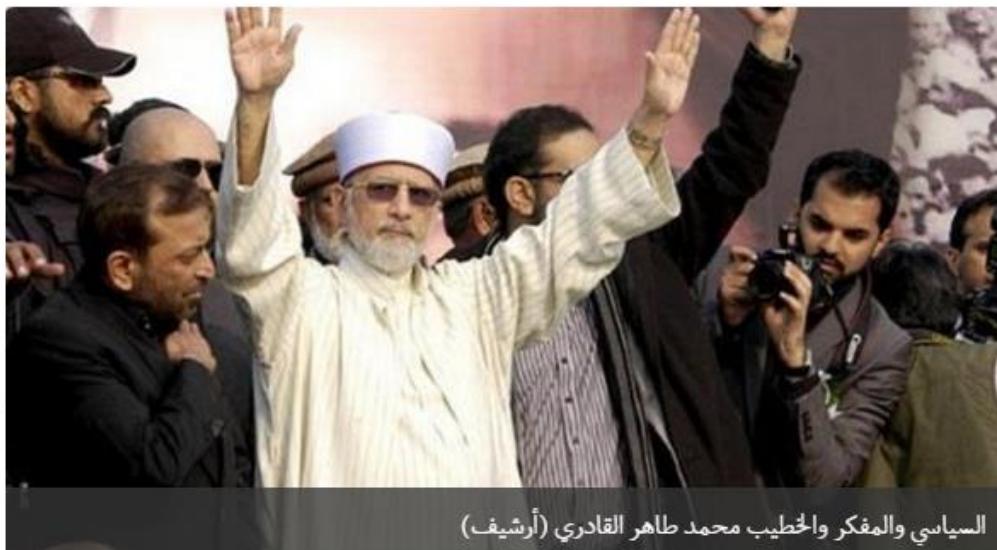

تاریخ 23.06.2015

مواضيع طالب

<http://24.ae/article/167606/%D8%B1%D8%AC%D9%84-%D8%AF%D9%8A%D9%86-%D8%A8%D8%A7%D9%83%D8%B3%D8%AA%D8%A7%D9%86%D9%8A-%D9%8A%D8%B6%D8%B9-%D9%85%D9%86%D9%87%D8%A7%D8%AC%D8%A7%D9%8B-%D9%84%D9%85%D9%83%D8%A7%D9%81%D8%AD%D8%A9-%D8%A7%D9%84%D8%A7%D8%B1%D9%87%D8%A7%D8%A8-%D9%88%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%81%D9%83%D8%B1-%D8%A7%D9%84%D9%85%D8%AA%D8%B4%D8%AF%D8%AF-%D9%81%D9%8A-%D8%A8%D8%B1%D9%8A%D8%B7%D8%A7%D9%86%D9%8A%D8%A7.aspx>

بهدف منع الشبان من الالتحاق بالمتطرفين
رجل دين باكستاني يضع منهاجاً لمكافحة الإرهاب والفكر المتشدد في
بريطانيا

السياسي والمفكر والخطيب محمد طاهر القادري (أرشيف)

وضع رجل دين باكستاني مسلم منهاجاً "لمكافحة الإرهاب" في لندن، اليوم الثلاثاء، يهدف لتفنيد نهج الجماعات المتشددة مثل تنظيم داعش، ومنع الشبان من الجنوح نحو التطرف والتجهيز إلى سوريا.

وقال السياسي والمفكر والخطيب محمد طاهر القادري "إنه يريد لمنهاجه الواقع في 900 صفحة الذي يشمل طرحاً دينياً وعقائدياً أن يقوض فكر ومنهاج المتشددين وأن يدرس ليس فقط في الجامعات والمعاهد الإسلامية بل أيضاً في المدارس في جميع أنحاء بريطانيا".

وأضاف روبيتز "نريد أن نوضح أن جميع الممارسات التي يقوم بها تنظيم داعش في العراق والشام أو أي منظمة إرهابية ومتطرفة إما باسم الله أو الدين أو بعرض تأسيس أي نوع من الدولة الإسلامية من طريق العنف .. خالف الإسلام والقرآن تماماً".

دعوة كاميرون

وأعلن القادري عن منهاجه في أعقاب دعوة رئيس الوزراء البريطاني ديفيد كاميرون المجتمعات المسلمة، ليذل المزيد من الجهد لوقف جنوح الشباب نحو التطرف على يد جماعات مثل تنظيم داعش في العراق والشام، معتبراً أن بعض المسلمين يتغاضون بصمت عن الآراء المتطرفة.

وجاءت تصريحات كاميرون بعد أن فجر بريطاني (17 عاماً) من تنظيم داعش نفسه في العراق، في حين يعتقد أن ثلاث شقيقات سافرن إلى سوريا مع أبنائهن التسعة.

وقال القادری "إن الأولاد الذين يتوجهون إلى تنظيم داعش ويقاتلون هناك ويترون نعيم مجتمعهم البريطاني سيذهبون إلى الجحيم".

وكان القادری أصدر قبل خمس سنوات، فتوى بأن الإرهابيين والانتحاريين كفار.

ولدى سؤاله كيف يمكن لعمله الأكاديمي أن يكافح هذه الظاهرة، قال القادری رئيس مؤسسة منهاج القرآن الدينية والتعليمية "إن 50 بريطانيا و50 آخرين من باقي أوروبا يتلقون حالياً تدريباً، لنشر نصوص منهاجه عبر وسائل التواصل الاجتماعي".

وقال القادری "ستشن هذه الحرب من محورين ولن تشمل فقط الكتب في الحلقات الدراسية والجوامع والمدارس بل أيضاً وسائل التواصل الاجتماعي".

ويخطط القادری لحمل منهاجه إلى باكستان والهند ونشره في أنحاء أوروبا والولايات المتحدة.

عودة إلى الأعلى

VIDEOS AND INTERVIEWS

<http://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b05zc8j0>

Radio 4 Programme aired 23rd June in morning. Peace trainers can be heard from 27:45 onwards.

<http://www.bbc.co.uk/programmes/b05zhht>

BBC Radio 4 interview Shaykh-ul-Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri from 01:36.

<https://soundcloud.com/nicemister/dr-tahir-ul-qadri-interview-with-iain-dale-on-lbc>

<http://www.presstv.ir/Video/2015/06/23/417226/London-Islam-ISIL-UK->

The image is a screenshot of a Press TV video page. At the top left is the Press TV logo. Below it, the title "Counter-terrorism curriculum launched in UK schools" is displayed. Underneath the title are navigation links: "Home / Featured / Reports". To the right of the title is the date "Tue Jun 23, 2015 10:5PM". On the far right are social media sharing icons. The main content area features a video thumbnail of a man with a white beard and a white turban, wearing glasses and a dark suit, speaking into an orange Press TV microphone. Behind him is a blue banner with the text "PEACE EDUCATION PROGRAMME ISLAMIC CURRICULUM FOR PEACE & COUNTER-TERRORISM" and the website "www.peaceeducationprogramme.org". To the right of the video thumbnail is a text box containing the reporter's information: "Mohamed Walji" and "Press TV, London". Below this is a brief description of the report: "Ways to tackle extremism are a hot topic at the moment in the United Kingdom. Now a new curriculum is being launched for schoolchildren, which is aimed at countering the terrorist narrative in the hope of removing radicalization. Press TV's Mohamed Walji from London has filed this report."

http://www.bbc.com/news/uk-33235583&ocid=wsnews\_chatapps\_whatsapp\_msg\_trial\_link1

Can a book help Muslims beat extremism?

23 June 2015 Last updated at 09:06 BST

At least 700 British people are thought to have travelled to the Middle East to join jihadist organisations, and the influence of extremism in the UK has become a growing concern.

A new curriculum is being launched to help tackle the radicalisation of young Muslims.

It is hoped that the syllabus will provide the tools they need to recognise extremist ideology before people travel abroad.

The BBC's Tim Muffett reports.

<https://www.facebook.com/safyah.akhtar/videos/vb.100002185948770/826874194062104/?type=2&theater>

BBC Look North coverage 23rd June in evening.

<https://www.facebook.com/Minhaj.Youth.Greece/videos/vb.554574554576758/1008894569144752/?type=2&theater>

Bol (Urdu channel) coverage. Interviews of Baroness Warsi, Brigadier Paul and MP Khalid.

http://www.dailymotion.com/video/x2v39s3\_dr-tahir-ul-qadri-delivering-his-keynote-address-at-anti-terror-curriculum-launch-in-london\_news

Dr. Tahir ul Qadri delivering his keynote address at Anti Terror Curriculum Launch in London.

<http://www.dailymotion.com/video/x2v5xmr>

Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri launches the 'first' Islamic counter-terrorism curriculum for school and university students

<http://enjoyviewers.com/2015/06/24/shaykh-ul-islam-dr-muhammad-tahir-ul-qadri-launches-the-first-islamic-counter-terrorism-curriculum-for-school-and-university-students-in-london/>

Shaykh ul Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri launches the 'First' Islamic Counter-Terrorism Curriculum for School and University Students in London

Shaykh ul Islam Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri launches the 'First' Islamic Counter-Terrorism Curriculum for School and University Students in London.

<http://enjoyviewers.com/2015/06/23/watch-dr-tahir-ul-qadri-delivering-his-speech-at-%e2%80%aa%e2%80%8eanti-terror-curriculum%e2%80%ac-launch-in-london/>

Watch Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri Delivering His Speech at Anti Terror Curriculum Launch in London.

Must watch Dr. Tahir ul Qadri Delivering His Keynote Address at Anti Terror Curriculum Launch in London. Watch Dr Tahir ul Qadri's speech at Anti Terror Curriculum launch in London.

<http://enjoyviewers.com/2015/06/24/must-watch-closing-remarks-shaykh-ul-islam-professor-of-dr-tahir-ul-qadri-at-launch-of-peace-curriculum-in-london/>

Must watch Closing remarks Shaykh ul Islam Professor of Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri at launch of Peace Curriculum in London

Must watch Closing remarks Shaykh ul Islam Professor of Dr. Tahir-ul-Qadri at launch of Peace Curriculum in London.

<http://replay.minhaj.tv/videos/archives/dr-muhammad-tahir-ul-qadri-talks-to-bbc-radio-22-06-2015-5006>

A video frame showing silhouettes of several individuals holding rifles and a flag with Arabic script against a bright background. A progress bar at the bottom indicates the video is at 00:56 / 05:47.

II    🔊    00:56 / 05:47

Counter-terrorism 'should be on the curriculum'
Today, 22/06/2015
Muslim children should be taught deradicalisation, says Dr Muhammad Tahir-ul-Qadri.